

Literature and Criticism

From Chicago

Professing Criticism

Essays on the Organization of Literary Study

John Guillory

“Professing Criticism is a sociology of criticism, an argument about how, during the twentieth century, the practice evolved from a wide-ranging amateur pursuit, requiring no specialist training or qualifications, into a profession and a discipline housed within the academy. . . . The profession of literary study as it is currently institutionalized in the university may not be the place from which the journey toward a future criticism begins. To sit alongside Guillory on his high perch, or maybe a branch or two higher, is not to dream of the past or to mourn the present. It is to scan new horizons for the second coming of the critic.”—Merve Emre, The New Yorker

States of Plague

Reading Albert Camus in a Pandemic

Alice Kaplan and Laura Marris

*“In this mélange of history, literary analysis, and memoir, the authors explore the intersection between a celebrated novel, current realities, scholarship, language, and the tricks that time and circumstance play on all of them. Seasoned literary historian Kaplan and poet and translator Marris, whose new translation of The Plague was published in 2021, team up to cultivate a deeper understanding of Camus’ classic novel. In alternating short essays, they braid together their distinct sensibilities to offer fresh insight and added significance to a canonical mid-20th-century book. . . . This is a notable addition to the literature about an indispensable French author.”*—Kirkus

2022 152 p. 5½ x 8½

Travels in the Americas

Notes and Impressions of a New World

Albert Camus

*“Nine months after the end of the Second World War, Camus crossed the Atlantic on the SS Oregon to New York. Three years later, he journeyed via Dakar to South America. This attractively illustrated new translation of the journals from those trips shows us an intensely curious, often solemn, and sometimes witty Camus as he attempts to understand the cultures he was encountering. As Alice Kaplan explains in her Introduction, the travel logs are an invitation to ‘see the Americas, as if for the first time, through his eyes.’”*—Edward J. Hughes, author of Albert Camus

Metaracial

Hegel, Antiracism, and Political Identity
Rei Terada

“Behind the ‘subject slave,’ universally human by virtue of the dialectic, there is a second slave hiding, the Black slave. Deconstructing this trope in Hegel, Terada reveals the philosophical sources of an embarrassing paradox—antiracism—which continuously affects political radicalism. An elucidation which is demanding but also fascinating and hugely clarifying!”—Étienne Balibar, author of Citizen Subject: Foundations for Philosophical Anthropology

Apropos of Something

A History of Irrelevance and Relevance
Elisa Tamarkin

“Apropos of Something is a phenomenal achievement—lucid, urgent, and rampantly intelligent. Tamarkin’s readings of art and literature emerge, like a leaping trout in a Winslow Homer painting, from the ground of careful philosophical explication to capture that feeling of surprise when we truly pay attention to something. Tamarkin does not simply analyze; she teaches us how to see. As a contribution to intellectual history, philosophy, aesthetic criticism, and theories of reading, this book possesses an Emersonian power to realize one of our great abstractions.”—Gavin Jones, author of Reclaiming John Steinbeck: Writing for the Future of Humanity

5 Paper ISBN: 978-0-226-45312-5 $35.00 Your Price: $24.50

My Dark Room

Spaces of the Inner Self in Eighteenth-Century England
Julie Park

“In a dazzling sequence of chapters Julie Park captures the excitements and tensions that emerged as imaginative private worlds were projected on real geographies and spaces. My Dark Room will unsettle the now very long-standing assumptions about the primacy of fiction and the novel in the construction of eighteenth-century subjectivities, as it makes a compelling case for the subject in space created through interior projections.”—Peter de Bolla, University of Cambridge

Lydia Maria Child

A Radical American Life

Lydia Moland

“After the 2016 presidential election. . . Moland discovered Child, a woman, she later learned, ‘unwilling to accept the conventional wisdom of her time and unable to abide by its norms.’ . . . Moland began to wonder, ‘What could the example of her life teach me?’ And ‘does the world need another white hero?’ Moland’s Lydia Maria Child: A Radical American Life answers. . . . ‘We might not need more white heroes,’ she writes, ‘but I have come to believe that white Americans like me need more examples like hers.’”—New York Review of Books

7 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-71571-1 $35.00 Your Price: $24.50

Maladies of the Will

The American Novel and the Modernity Problem

Jennifer L. Fleissner

“In this brilliant, utterly singular study of the will, the modern individual, and modernity itself as problems, Fleissner makes a stunning intervention in the history and theory of the novel. It is no exaggeration to say that Maladies of the Will is on par with the achievements of Ian Watt and György Lukács. But Fleissner’s ability to combine astonishing erudition with deft diagnoses of critical impasses in our present strikes me as unparalleled. This book marks nothing less than a historical turning point in how we will read literature.”—Sianne Ngai, University of Chicago

2022 512 p. 6 x 9

American Mediterraneans

A Study in Geography, History, and Race

Susan Gillman

“In this stunningly original book, Gillman takes the reader on a journey through multiply imagined American Mediterraneans and their contrasting encodings of race, climate and geographical destiny. In Southern California, Anglo-American entrepreneurs invented a romantic Spanish culture to sell real-estate while expunging indigenous and Mexican histories. In the Caribbean, Mediterraneity helped justify the expansionist project of slaveowners. In each case, Gillman warns us that geo-historical metaphors have often served as projections of a Western right to conquest.”—Mike Davis, author of Ecology of Fear: Los Angeles and the Imagination of Disaster

2022 208 p. 6 x 9 26 halftones

9 Paper ISBN: 978-0-226-81966-2 $27.50 Your Price: $19.25

James Joyce and the Irish Revolution

The Easter Rising as Modern Event
Luke Gibbons

"Gibbons may well be Ireland's most brilliant literary and cultural critic: a distinctive voice and a decisive eye. Here, as always, Gibbons's commentary ebbs around observed details with a verve worthy of Benjamin, as he makes clear not only that Joyce's work was revolutionary but also that it was recognized as such by some of the revolutionaries themselves. This is an immensely rich and suggestive work, an instant classic of Irish literary criticism."—Enda Duffy, University of California, Santa Barbara

Fragments of a World

William of Auvergne and His Medieval Life
Lesley Smith

"In this thoughtful and accessible study, the thirteenth-century theologian and bishop of Paris William of Auvergne comes alive through an especially close reading of his sermons. Smith has a light touch that complements her thorough mastery of the details of William's worldview and the context within which he taught and provided pastoral care. Fragments of a World is a stunning achievement, one of the finest biographies of a medieval figure that I know and a sheer pleasure to read."

—William Chester Jordan, Princeton University

The Inner Sea

Maritime Literary Culture in Early Modern Portugal
Josiah Blackmore

"In our fruitful age of global studies and the West's fascination with Africa and India, The Inner Sea could not be more timely. Blackmore offers readers a stunning account of Da Gama's unprecedented voyages from Portugal to Africa in 1497, reaching India in 1498, and their profound meaning. These journeys for the first time transformed a world divided by the seas into an interconnected one, not only reaching South Africa, but India as well. The Inner Sea is richly documented by many sources that the author has chosen to accompany his dazzling readings of Camões's extraordinary maritime epic adventure, Os Lusitadas."—Marina S. Brownlee, Princeton University

Rhetorical Renaissance

The Mistress Art and Her Masterworks

Kathy Eden

“This excellent book displays all of Eden’s characteristic focused learning and forensic sharpness of argument. Eden takes the reader on a serious journey, full of tight connections and startling insights, into the intellectual foundations of the Renaissance literary system. Rhetorical Renaissance is a significant contribution to our knowledge of the history of rhetoric and culture of the Renaissance, revealing how Renaissance writers thought and wrote by drilling down into the intellectual foundations of the age.”—Colin Burrow, University of Oxford

Eleanor of Aquitaine, as It Was Said

Truth and Tales about the Medieval Queen

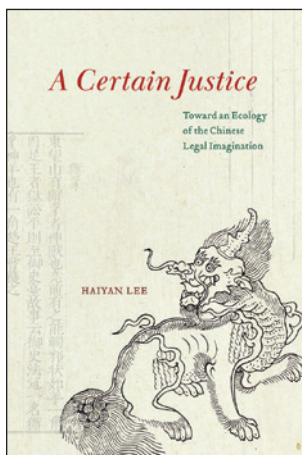

Karen Sullivan

“A fascinating must-read for all enthusiasts of Eleanor of Aquitaine. Sullivan conducts a survey of Eleanor’s life via a detailed focus on the main historical controversies. The author does not ‘pick a side,’ but instead asks all of us to revisit our preconceptions of this most inspiring medieval queen. The book manages the neat trick of providing much food for thought while being a highly enjoyable read. I look forward to rereading it already!”

A Certain Justice

Toward an Ecology of the Chinese Legal Imagination

Haiyan Lee

“A Certain Justice offers a fresh interpretation of Chinese legal culture informed by China’s own literary traditions. Guiding the reader on a colorful journey from spy thrillers and tales of hypocrisy through contemporary court dramas, Lee reveals a vibrant legal imagination that is hierarchical rather than horizontal, encompassing both the ‘high justice’ of the state and the ‘low justice’ of society at large. The result, she suggests, is an intertwining of law and politics animated by a logic quite unlike that of Western jurisprudence, but no less important for informing conceptions of morality and governance.”
