The Merits of Women
Wherein Is Revealed Their Nobility and Their Superiority to Men
Moderata Fonte
Edited and with an Introduction by Virginia Cox
Foreword by Dacia Maraini
A new introduction and foreword situate The Merits of Women in its historical context, written as it was on the cusp of Shakespeare’s heyday, and straddling the centuries between the feminist works of Christine de Pizan and Mary Wollstonecraft.

“Literary proof that when it comes to male-female relationships, the more things change, the more they stay the same.”—Kirkus Reviews

1997, 2018 128 p. 5 x 7 1 halftone

New Edition

Marvelous Possessions
The Wonder of the New World
Stephen Greenblatt
With a New Preface

“Nothing so original has ever been written on European responses to 'the wonder of the New World.'”—Times Literary Supplement

“By far the most intellectually gripping and penetrating discussion of the relationship between intruders and natives is provided by Greenblatt’s Marvelous Possessions. Nothing else in the entire literature of the quincentennial remotely approaches his vivid engagement with the crucial issue of cross-cultural perceptions.”—Simon Schama, New Republic

2017 304 p. 6 x 9 9 halftones

The Worldmakers
Global Imagining in Early Modern Europe
Ayesha Ramachandran
Winner of the Yale MacMillan Center Gaddis Smith International Book Prize, and the MLA Scaglione Prize for Comparative Literary Studies

“The Worldmakers is . . . a consummate, beautiful, and original study of the Renaissance on its own terms, showing that even in canonical texts of European humanism, there is much new territory to be explored.”—Modern Language Quarterly

“The book’s impressive payoff lies in its new and often thrilling readings of a wide range of well-loved and much-studied early modern texts. . . . Ramachandran argues that early moderns turned to the imagination to meet the challenge of conceiving the newly available world as a whole rather than a motley collection of parts.”—Modern Philology

The Mercenary Mediterranean
Sovereignty, Religion, and Violence in the Medieval Crown of Aragon
Hussein Fancy
“This is an engaging and far-ranging book, written in lively and evocative prose, which brings the worlds of the jenets to life; it will appeal to both scholars and students, whether specialists in the history of the medieval Spains, or not... Exemplary. . . A ripping tale.”
—Mediterranean Historical Review

The Fullness of Time
Temporalities of the Fifteenth-Century Low Countries
Matthew S. Champion
“In this stunningly original and meticulously researched account of time in medieval culture, Matthew Champion extends an august scholarly tradition by virtue of the extraordinarily rich and diverse sources he brings to bear on excavating the experience and philosophy of time in the Low Countries. . . . Champion offers readings that are insightful and moreover virtuosic in the ease with which they move between disciplinary discourses.”—Emma Dillon, King’s College London

Lost Maps of the Caliphs
Drawing the World in Eleventh-Century Cairo
Yossef Rapoport and Emilie Savage-Smith
Lost Maps of the Caliphs provides the first general overview of the millennium-old The Book of Curiosities and the unique insight it offers into medieval Islamic thought. Opening with an account of the remarkable discovery of the manuscript and its purchase by the Bodleian Library, the authors use The Book of Curiosities to re-evaluate the development of astrology, geography, and cartography in the first four centuries of Islam.
As Lost Maps of the Caliphs makes clear, not only is The Book of Curiosities one of the greatest achievements of medieval mapmaking, it is also a remarkable contribution to the story of Islamic civilization that opens an unexpected window to the medieval Islamic view of the world.

Trading Territories
Mapping the Early Modern World
Jerry Brotton
“A beautifully illustrated account of the status, construction, and purposes of maps in the early modern world.”—History Today
“Brotton’s elegant Trading Territories shows how historically maps were about facilitating trade and celebrating (and exerting) influence.”—Independent

Habitual Offenders
A True Tale of Nuns, Prostitutes, and Murderers in Seventeenth-Century Italy
Craig A. Monson
“Monson’s combination of style and substance makes this a thoroughly engaging work to read. His ability to move from the smallest of significant objects, silver-handled forks and scarlet jackets, to examine the struggles for power between the Pope and Europe’s most powerful families is notable, resulting in a work highly enjoyable for academic and lay readers alike.”—Women’s History

Animal Skins and the Reading Self in Medieval Latin and French Bestiaries

Sarah Kay

“Animal Skins . . . is quite simply a tour de force. . . . The originality of this study resides in its astute assemblage of an astonishing variety of medieval and modern discourses revolving around these works and, most centrally, the manuscripts that have transmitted them.”—David Hult, University of California, Berkeley

“Exceedingly well researched and organized. . . . Kay’s close readings of bestiary texts, images, and parchment will be of tremendous interest to students and scholars from a wide range of disciplines, including medieval studies, manuscript studies, animal studies, and skin studies.”—French Review

“Animals, whether actual or hybrids such as werewolves and snake women, are a puzzling presence in many medieval narratives. In this thought-provoking study of some dozen and a half predominantly French works from the 12th through the 15th centuries, McCracken (Univ. of Michigan) examines animals as a window on medieval ideas related to the notion of sovereignty. . . . Highly recommended.”—Choice

“Lively and provocative. . . . This is an important contribution to the burgeoning literature on medieval cognition, and will bring these materials helpfully into play as part of the exegetical toolkit of literary scholars.”—Review of English Studies

“Karnes’s brilliantly counterintuitive argument asserts that the writing out of the role of imagination in late-medieval English meditation does not indicate the weakness of imagination, but rather its potency.”—D. Vance Smith, Princeton University

The Danger of Romance
Truth, Fantasy, and Arthurian Fictions
Karen Sullivan
“Zeroing in with philosophical precision on the bond between truth and trust, Sullivan offers a spirited defense of romance against ‘realists’ who spurn its vain fictions and ‘romantics’ who may love it too blindly. The Danger of Romance achieves its finest insights by following Merlin, Arthur, Lancelot, and the Grail to reveal how Arthurian romance contains its own critique even as it exuberantly represents the power of imagination.”—Matilda Bruckner, Boston College

Kathy Eden
“Kathy Eden’s elegant, concise, densely footnoted study marvelously explores how the combination of th[el] core ancient perception of the letter as intimate communication with the sense of the letter as a general paradigm of reading and writing worked on the imagination of the European Renaissance, once it gets into the system, at a particularly significant point, with Petrarch’s rediscovery and creative imitation of the private correspondence of Cicero.”—Times Literary Supplement

Staging Contemplation
Participatory Theology in Middle English Prose, Verse, and Drama
Eleanor Johnson
In this groundbreaking new book, Eleanor Johnson argues for the pervasiveness and accessibility of contemplative works to medieval audiences. By drawing together ostensibly diverse literary genres, Staging Contemplation paints late Middle English contemplative writing as a broad genre that operated collectively and experientially as much as through radical individual disengagement from the world.

The Refracted Muse
Literature and Optics in Early Modern Spain
Enrique García Santo-Tomás
Translated by Vincent Barletta
“An immensely erudite and suggestive book, The Refracted Muse is not only a major contribution to the development of Spanish literature but also to the intersection between literature, astronomy, and optics. This new revised and translated version surpasses even the original. The translation is crisp, nuanced, and accurate, exhibiting the original as if it were through a lens that captures, clarifies, and amplifies its most important insights.”—Frederick de Armas, University of Chicago 2017 320 p. 6 x 9 11 halftones

Shakespeare Dwelling
Designs for the Theater of Life
Julia Reinhard Lupton
“This immensely resourceful, deeply inventive book should be a touchstone in Shakespeare studies, and for new humanistic work. It generously affords us new ways of imagining Shakespeare’s astonishingly syncretic dramaturgy.”—Sarah Beckwith, Duke University 2018 272 p. 5\(\frac{1}{2}\) x 8\(\frac{1}{2}\) 5 halftones

Poetry in a World of Things
Aesthetics and Empiricism in Renaissance Ekphrasis
Rachel Eisendrath
“Rachel Eisendrath provides a nuanced account of Renaissance defenses of aesthetic pleasure that challenges the traditional association of the early modern period with new scientific notions of objectivity. At the same time, she makes a powerful contribution to contemporary debates in the humanities about ‘distant reading,’ ‘surface reading,’ ‘the new materialism,’ and ‘thing theory,’ in the process reasserting the traditional virtues of humanistic education. . . . [An] exceptionally well-informed, theoretically sophisticated, and beautifully written work.”—Victoria Kahn, University of California, Berkeley 2017 208 p. 6 x 9 12 halftones

Shakespeare’s Roman Trilogy
The Twilight of the Ancient World
Paul A. Cantor
“Shakespeare’s Roman Trilogy is a marvelous and masterful work. . . . [Cantor’s] capacious intellect and intense intellectual curiosity are decidedly on display in this compelling argument that Coriolanus, Julius Caesar, and Antony and Cleopatra comprise a trilogy meant to document the decline and fall of the Roman republic, both in the lives of the individual heroes, and in the life of the Roman city or polis.”—Pamela K. Cronica Walliae
Humphrey Llwyd
Edited by Ieuan M. Williams and J. Beverley Smith
Humphrey Llwyd (1527–68) was a prominent Welsh cartographer and antiquary, as well as a Member of Parliament. Cronica Walliae is by far his most important and biggest extant work, but though he completed it in 1559, he never published it. This edition presents Llwyd’s achievement in its fullest state, using extant manuscripts to reproduce Llwyd’s original as faithfully as possible.

The Intellectual Properties of Learning
A Prehistory from Saint Jerome to John Locke
John Willinsky
John Willinsky puts current debates over intellectual property into context, asking what it is about learning that helped to create the concept even as it gave the products of knowledge a different legal and economic standing than other sorts of property. Willinsky shows that learning gave rise to our idea of intellectual property while remaining distinct from, if not wholly uncompromised by, the commercial economy that this concept inspired, making it clear that today’s push for marketable intellectual property threatens the very nature of the quest for learning on which it rests.

Titian and the End of the Venetian Renaissance
Tom Nichols

“Nichols’s book offers the kind of free-flowing and deeply intelligent analysis of a painter’s career that can only be produced after long study and intimate familiarity with his subject. It is beautifully written and generously illustrated, and you feel both Nichols’s and Titian’s minds working at every turn.”—Renaissance and Reformation Studies

Titian
The Grimani Risen Christ. An Early Masterpiece
Artur Rosenauer

In 2013, art historian Artur Rosenauer made the most important Titian discovery in decades: an early and previously unknown painting, The Risen Christ, probably commissioned by a religious community when the artist was in his early twenties. Long concealed within private collections, the painting is now on display at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, and this accompanying book makes it accessible to the public for the first time in more than one hundred years.

Raphael
Achim Gnann
With Contributions by C. Whistler and B. Thomas

This book focuses on Raphael’s drawings and paintings, bringing together more than one hundred and fifty of his works, representing all his major projects in those forms and offering an overview of the various periods of his career, from his early years in Umbria through his move to Florence and on to Rome. In addition to full-color reproductions of Raphael’s work, the book details his design methods, as well as his process of preparing canvas or panel paintings and frescoes and explores the widely varied materials he employed, including silverpoint, pen, ink, charcoal, and red chalk. The result will enchant any fan of this Renaissance genius.

Shira Brisman

“Today it seems harder than ever to say anything refreshingly new about Albrecht Dürer and his epoch-making art. Yet Brisman has done just that, taking us inside a guiding principle of Renaissance art and culture that had, until now, been hiding in plain sight. . . . Gleaming with intelligence on every page, and carried off with a rare verve, this book showcases what is to be gained when the materiality of communication combines with the social history of art.”—Mitchell B. Michelangelo’s Sculpture
Leo Steinberg
Edited by Sheila Schwartz
With an Introduction by Richard Neer

In essays and lectures that ranged from old masters to contemporary art, Leo Steinberg combined scholarly erudition with an eloquent prose that illuminated his subject and a credo that privileged the visual evidence of the image over the literature written about it. Michelangelo’s Sculpture is the first in a series of volumes of Steinberg’s selected writings and unpublished lectures, edited by his longtime associate Sheila Schwartz. The volume also includes a book review debunking psychoanalytic interpretation of the master’s work, a light-hearted look at Michelangelo and the medical profession and, finally, the shortest piece Steinberg ever published.

Becoming a New Self
Practices of Belief in Early Modern Catholicism
Moshe Sluhovsky
“Sluhovsky describes a revolution to which we have paid little or no attention—the refinement and proliferation of traditions of spiritual guidance in Catholic Europe in the early modern period. Meticulously researched and studiously impartial, this book delivers a salutary jolt to dominant narratives of the emergence of the self in modern times from Max Weber to Michel Foucault. It adds an unexpectedly rich new strand to our understanding of the culture of the West.”—Peter Brown, Princeton University

The Young Descartes

Nobility, Rumor, and War

Harold J. Cook

“The Young Descartes is an engaging and intriguing work. Harold Cook follows René Descartes through the political minefields of the French court, riven by the rivalry between Marie de Medici and her son, Louis XIII, and his eminence grise, the formidable Cardinal Richelieu. . . . This book makes central the fact that Descartes, frequently relegated to the status of arm-chair philosopher, actually traveled widely, indeed, almost incessantly for crucial periods of his life, and asks important questions about where he traveled and to what ends.”—Kathleen Wellman, Southern Methodist University

The French Origins of “Newtonian” Mechanics, 1680-1715

J. B. Shank

Before Voltaire explores how Newton’s ideas made their way not just through the realm of French science, but into the larger world of society and culture of which Principia was an intertwined part. Shank also details a history of the beginnings of calculus-based mathematical physics that integrates it into the larger intellectual currents in France at the time.

Influences

Art, Optics, and Astrology in the Italian Renaissance

Mary Quinlan-McGrath

“Compelling . . . [and] carefully researched. . . . The language is clear throughout the book and complex concepts on optics and mathematics are explained effectively. The book gives new significant insights into the mathematical, philosophical, and astrological cultures of the Renaissance and their application in pictorial works of the period.”—Barbara Tramelli, Centaurus

2013 304 p. 6 x 9 14 color plates, 12 halftones, 14 line drawings

From Sight to Light

The Passage from Ancient to Modern Optics

A. Mark Smith

“In what will surely become a canonical work, Smith surveys the development of optics in the Western world from classical Greece through Johannes Kepler . . . Smith systematically guides readers through all major texts in the history of optics, at times in painstaking detail, making this book a valuable reference work. . . . Students and faculty alike—in fact, anyone interested in the nature and development of premodern optics—will need to consult this book. Essential.”—Choice

Robert Recorde

Tudor Scholar and Mathematician

“Roberts’s new biography of Robert Recorde is a wonderfully readable account of this fascinating Tudor scientist, his difficult career in times of religious and political dangers, and his innovative and remarkably entertaining textbooks. It provides context to help the reader fully appreciate the work of this important pioneer of mathematics education.”—Tony Mann, Director, University of Greenwich

“This engagingly written book presents the ups and downs of Recorde’s eventful life with great clarity.”—Robin Wilson, The Open University

Distributed for University of Wales Press

2016 192 p. 5½ x 8½ 25 halftones

Medusa’s Menagerie

Otto Marseus van Schrieck and the Scholars

Edited by Gero Seelig and the Staatliches Museum Schwerin

“It is part of the charm of these paintings that they are as much works of Marseus’s imagination as of scientific observation. This is what is so beguiling about his art—one can see in it changing modes of thought at work, a gradual groping toward a world of scientific accuracy, even as the arrangement of the lush, unearthly plants and the animals, with their wonderful, quizzical expressiveness, seems to spring from the mind of the painter, presented for maximum visual appeal and delight.”—New York Review of Books
