RELIGIOUS STUDIES FROM CHICAGO
The Religion of Existence
Asceticism in Philosophy from Kierkegaard to Sartre
Noreen Khawaja

“Khawaja has produced a searching work that ranges over a vast terrain of philosophical argumentation, from Kierkegaard’s analysis of Christian existence to Heidegger’s existential analytic to Sartre’s ‘phenomenological ontology.’ Its grasp of the relevant philosophical issues is impressive, and its lucid style of exposition should serve to remind us that Continental philosophy can be engaging as well as deep.”—Peter E. Gordon, Harvard University

Heidegger’s Confessions
The Remains of Saint Augustine in “Being and Time” and Beyond
Ryan Coyne

“Coyne provides a rich exploration of ‘Heidegger’s own portrayals of Augustinian concepts,’ as he writes in the introduction. He traces these Augustinian concepts through Heidegger’s work to reveal the ways in which they inform some of Heidegger’s most fundamental themes. . . . Articulating his argument with care, Coyne brings new light to Heidegger and theology. . . . Highly recommended.”—Choice

Powers of Distinction
On Religion and Modernity
Nancy Levene

 “[A] major contribution to what has been called post-secularism, a field often taken as the study of the afterlife of religion in fundamentally secular western modernity. But for Levene, the religious and the secular in modernity are not self-sufficient and opposed propositions; in fact, the belief in the opposition of those ideas, whether in favor of the religious or the secular, is what modernity, in Levene’s sense, refutes. This book will . . . be limited to people working in ‘religious studies,’ a category that is indeed fundamentally redefined here.”—Kenneth Reinhard, University of California, Los Angeles

God Being Nothing
Toward a Theogony
Ray L. Hart

“In this brilliant speculative work, Hart not only provides a new method for philosophical theology but a new and daring set of readings of the major issues of contemporary Christian theology and philosophy of religion, from God to humankind. . . . Hart develops the daring explorations of his earlier epoch-making work, Unfinished Man and the Imagination, in a manner that challenges every serious philosopher and theologian: a major work that restores speculative thought to its rightful place in contemporary Christian theology.”—David Tracy, University of Chicago Divinity School

Credulity
A Cultural History of US Mesmerism
Emily Ogden

The first comprehensive history of mesmerism in the US in more than thirty years. Emily Ogden connects mesmerism to broad issues of American faith, skepticism, and gullibility. She argues that mesmerists, who were active in the US between 1836 and the Civil War, offered an applied science of excessive belief, or credulity. Mesmerism’s detractors called it an example of credulity, the mesmerists themselves claimed it as a rational means of manipulating credulity. This book helps us understand how the category of belief organized American life at the threshold of nineteenth-century modernity.

Consuming Religion
Kathryn Lofton

“Lofton brilliantly probes the most cunning junctures of contemporary neoliberal religion. Ranging over corporate cubicles; the advertising industry; finance; the dark arts of the creation, promotion, and destruction of celebrity; and much, much more, Lofton shows how at the deepest levels of imagination, desire, and discipline the modern histories of neoliberalism and religion—and the contemporary practices of both—have been and remain utterly entwined. . . . With this book, Lofton not only emerges clearly as the contemporary study of religion’s Walter Benjamin; she also helps restore the social critical voice of religious studies. Such a project was never more urgent than it is today.” — Robert A. Orsi, author of History and Presence

Death Be Not Proud
The Art of Holy Attention
David Marno

“Death Be Not Proud is a major landmark in Donne studies. Subtly avoiding both hard-boiled historicism and reactionaroy formalism, Marno offers startlingly fresh readings of Donne’s work as part of a legacy of devotional strategies inherited from Aristotle, Paul, Augustine, and Petrarch. Much more than just a book on one of the greatest English poets, Death Be Not Proud should be read by anyone interested in the philosophy and form of devotional art from late antiquity to the dawn of Cartesianism.” — Peter McCullough, author of Sermons at Court: Politics and Religion in Elizabethan and Jacobean Preaching

Ekklesia
Three Inquiries in Church and State
Paul Christopher Johnson, Pamela E. Klassen, and Winnifred Fallers Sullivan

Offers a New World rejoinder to the largely Europe-centered academic discourse on church and state. Ekklesia sees in the settler states of North and South America alternative patterns of conjoined religious and political power, patterns resulting from the undertow of other gods, other peoples, and other claims to sovereignty. Through three closely-linked, intriguing inquiries, Ekklesia takes up the familiar topos of “church and state” in order to render it strange.

The Myth of Disenchantment
Magic, Modernity, and the Birth of the Human Sciences
Jason A. Josephson-Storm
“The implications of this book are vast and potentially revolutionary for the humanities. Josephson-Storm’s mastery over the history of western philosophy, his sharp eye for the magical lives of the intellectuals, and his expertise in Japanese religion render his voice uniquely multidimensional, utterly original, and eerily persuasive. I am deeply excited about The Myth of Disenchantment and what it portends for both our academic fields and our human futures.”—Jeffrey J. “This beautifully written and sharply observed book is simply put one of the most remarkable challenges to scholarship-as-usual that I have encountered. Political Philosophy and the Challenge of Revealed Religion
Heinrich Meier
Translated by Robert Berman
Heinrich Meier’s guiding insight in Political Philosophy and the Challenge of Revealed Religion is that philosophy must prove its right and its necessity in the face of the claim to truth and demand obedience of its most powerful opponent, revealed religion. Philosophy must rationally justify and politically defend its free and unreserved questioning, and, in doing so, turns decisively to political philosophy.

Maimonides’ "Guide of the Perplexed"

A Philosophical Guide

Alfred L. Ivry

"A major contribution. Ivry has given us the first complete commentary of Maimonides’ Guide of the Perplexed since the Middle Ages. His exposition masterfully situates the Guide in its proper historical context and his philosophical analysis critically addresses the issues that it provokes. Readers of the commentary will profit from his close examination of the text and will be stimulated by the philosophical questions that he puts to Maimonides."—Seymour Feldman, Rutgers University

A History of German Jewish Bible Translation

Abigail Gillman

“With a novel handle on a complex body of literature, Professor Gillman has crafted an original conceptual grid to overcome the atomized character of eleven distinct translations that, until now, have defied treatment by a single scholar. Gillman’s goal is not to discuss all translations, but rather to highlight the endless effort by German Jews to cultivate their religious identity in a Christian body politic deeply ambivalent about their integration.”—Ismar Schorsch, Jewish Theological Seminary

Modernity and the Jews in Western Social Thought

Chad Alan Goldberg

“Goldberg’s original and provocative thesis . . . is that Jews and Jews alone came to be treated as the signifiers of the pre-modern/modern binary. And as such, for scholars such as Durkheim, Marx, Weber, Sombart, Simmel, and Park, Jews were viewed as occupying a unique social space, being an Other unlike any other Other. Cogently argued and spelling out the implications for the discipline, this is a must-read book, deserving of serious scholarly reflection.”—Peter Kivisto, Augustana College and St. Petersburg State University

Islam in Liberalism
Joseph A. Massad

“Islam in Liberalism is a welcome and timely intervention into one of the most pressing questions of our times: why does Islam occupy such a central inimical place within Western politics and ideology? Massad answers this question with a straightforward thesis: ‘Islam’ as such does not exist. What has come to be called ‘Islam’ as a supposedly homogenous cultural entity in reality has been fabricated by Western liberalism as its symbolic Other.”

With a New Preface
“Gant's approach to church history via music works. With hindsight, it becomes easy to see how developments in monastic plainsong gave way to the spark of the Reformation, or to imagine how adding flourishes to cathedral choirs led to further exploration in religious art. Possessions and Family in the Writings of Luke
Questioning the Unity of Luke’s Ethics
Stefan Nordgaard

In this volume, Stefan Nordgaard takes a close look at the question of unity in the books of Luke and Acts, with a specific eye toward Luke’s attitude toward possessions and family. He clearly maps out an ethics that is not set in stone, but changes over time, from a chiefly ascetic position in the gospel to a somewhat bourgeois position in Acts. Nordgaard offers a historical explanation for the change, built around the identity and activities of the person to whom Luke dedicated the books, “the most excellent Theophilus.”

Hyecho’s Journey
The World of Buddhism
Donald S. Lopez Jr.

“With his co-authors, Donald Lopez has written a book that envisions Buddhism around the 8th century—and beyond—in quite a different way than the standard historical narratives: by using a combination of the record of the rather unknown Sino-Korean Buddhist traveler Hyecho and selected pieces of Buddhist art, the authors explore the dimensions of space and materiality of Buddhism rather than exclusively focusing on event history. The result is a fascinating kaleidoscope of the Buddhist world stretching from the Eastern regions of the Near East to the Far East.”—Max Deeg, Cardiff University

Strange Tales of an Oriental Idol
An Anthology of Early European Portrayals of the Buddha
Edited by Donald S. Lopez Jr.

“Beautifully written, Strange Tales of an Oriental Idol will be a sourcebook for further research among scholars of Buddhism and of East-West interaction, as well as for those interested in Western intellectual history more generally.”—Judith Snodgrass, Western Sydney University

From Stone to Flesh
A Short History of the Buddha
Donald S. Lopez Jr.

“There is a profound satisfaction in accompanying Lopez in his journey to find the historical Buddha, whom Westerners first denounced as an idolater and demon and, much later, came to praise his teachings. This is an exceptional and even riveting account of Western civilization’s attempts to reconcile a foreign religion with its own beliefs, as well as an insightful view into how historical development has shaped Western knowledge of the world.”—Publishers Weekly

New Edition

Prisoners of Shangri-La
Tibetan Buddhism and the West
Donald S. Lopez, Jr.
With a New Preface

In this new edition, Donald Lopez reveals fanciful misconceptions of Tibetan life and religion. He examines, among much else, the politics of the term “Lamaism,” a pejorative synonym for Tibetan Buddhism; the various theosophical, psychedelic, and New Age purposes served by the so-called Tibetan Book of the Dead; and the unexpected history of the most famous of all Tibetan mantras, om mani padme hum.

Once a Peacock, Once an Actress

Twenty-Four Lives of the Bodhisattva from Haribhatta’s “Jatakamala”

Peter Khoroche

Translated by Peter Khoroche

“Peter Khoroche is a remarkably sensitive reader of Sanskrit, as one sees clearly from the fluent style he has chosen for this translation. The text itself is of major importance within the world of classical Buddhist literature and Buddhist art, and the stories that appear here are full of surprises even for scholars well versed in the Buddhist tradition.”—David Shulman, Hebrew University of Jerusalem

Subject to Death

Life and Loss in a Buddhist World

Robert Desjarlais

“A detailed, insightful, and at times moving ethnography of rituals around death and dying among ethnically Tibetan Hyolmo Buddhists in Nepal. Desjarlais provides rich descriptions of the Hyolmo’s multistage approach to dying, from the prayers and presence of lamas around a dying individual to help the person leave the world without any attachments to the construction of the funeral pyre. . . . [The] balance between attention to the particular and reflection on the universal is what makes this book so rich.”—Choice

Piers Vitebsky

“Incomparable. Fortunate are the Sora to have an ethnographer of such surpassing, immersive understanding. Fortunate are the students of history and religion to be shown how animism, shamanism, and conversion to monotheisms are actually experienced and understood. Fortunate beyond words are we all to have Vitebsky’s summum for generations of scholars.”—James C. Scott, Yale University

Spiritual Despots
Modern Hinduism and the Genealogies of Self-Rule
J. Barton Scott

“Much has been written on nineteenth-century Hindu reformers. Scott’s intervention in this discourse, however, is unique and stimulating; written through the lens of postmodernism and using English, Hindi, and Gujarati writings. Scott effectively provides new insights into the role of these reformers and their connections to ideas and theorists beyond the subcontinent, thereby going beyond the boundaries of nation and culture.”—Journal of the American Academy of Religion

The Hindu Tantric World
An Overview
André Padoux

“The Hindu Tantric World presents a refreshingly critical, balanced, and concise survey of the field. Doyen of Hindu Tantric studies, Padoux translates the fruits of his decades of specialized research into an elegant and useful guidebook that helpsfully situates these traditions within the broader fabric of South Asian religious culture. Nowhere else can a general readership find such an accessible and state-of-the-art treatment of the histories, theories, and practices of Tantric Hinduism.”—Christian K. Wedemeyer, University of Chicago

Dream Trippers
Global Daoism and the Predicament of Modern Spirituality
David A. Palmer and Elijah Siegler

“A fascinating, insightful, and at times quite amusing work. What makes Dream Trippers especially interesting and valuable is its acute attention to the contradictions and ambiguities of the cross-cultural history, definition, relevance, practice, and meaning of Daoism as lived today in a hyper-materialistic China and in a hyper-individualistic United States.”—Norman Girardot, Lehigh University

How Lifeworlds Work
Emotionality, Sociality, and the Ambiguity of Being
Michael Jackson
“How Lifeworlds Work is an intellectually compelling and beautifully written book that weaves together a lifetime of rich ethnography and philosophical reflection.”—Michael Lemberk, University of Toronto, Scarborough
“Jackson is one of the most important voices in the field of anthropology. In a world where hyperbolic claims are becoming the norm of academic writing, How Lifeworlds Work, with its classic elegance and clarity, is a gem to be widely shared and savored.”—Veena Das, Johns Hopkins University

Ex Voto
Votive Giving Across Cultures
Edited by Ittai Weinryb
This volume, one of the first collections devoted exclusively to the subject, builds on the assumption that a shared conceptual framework underpins votive objects, and that by merit of their consecration they have become a category representing a special stage in the life of a material. The contributors to this comparative study examine ex votos across a range of locations and time periods, including the classical Mediterranean world, medieval Europe, the period of the Catholic Reform, and on to Mexico, Shinto and Buddhist Japan, and Muslim Iran.

Evangelical Gotham
Religion and the Making of New York City, 1783-1860
Kyle B. Roberts
“The book tells readers much about religious life in early New York, as well as the way the churches and the city grew together. Its use of a wide variety of sources demonstrates that the author has creatively found many paths into understanding his topic. . . . The book also reminds readers to look for evangelicalism in cities and even in Manhattan itself, as contemporary congregations like Redeemer Presbyterian Church and Times Square Church can attest to the continued presence of evangelicalism near the heart of Gotham.”—Journal of the American Academy of Religion

Visions of Sodom
H. G. Cocks
“This is a powerful and important book. As St. Paul insisted, sodomy was a crime not to be named and so homoerotic desire quickly became screened by hyperbolic accusations of all kinds of iniquity. In disentangling these complexities, Cocks demonstrates not only how the ‘story of Sodom’s destruction is central to the history of homoerotic desire,’ but how its various inflections have been shaped by religious, political and cultural contingencies.”—Times Higher Education

The Emergence of the Religious Environmental Movement
Stephen Ellingson

“Ellingson provides a sociological exploration of contemporary faith-based environmental movements in the US. God’s Businessmen
Entrepreneurial Evangelicals in Depression and War
Sarah Ruth Hammond
Edited by Darren Dochuk
“God’s Businessmen adjusts our view of twentieth-century evangelicalism, helping move the story toward lay leaders and away from just the preachers and evangelists. Moreover, the book complements other recent scholarship in showing how naturally and easily conservative and mainline Protestantism became wedded to conservative economics and politics.”—Barry G. A Peaceful Conquest
Woodrow Wilson, Religion, and the New World Order
Cara Lea Burnidge
“In this lucid and thoughtful work, religion professor Burnidge places Wilson squarely in the context of the Protestant social gospel—an effort to Christianize the world in an image of a Western, white, patriarchal, middle-class society governed by noblesse oblige, reform legislation, social uplift, and international brotherhood. Such attitudes were advanced by a host of clergy. . . . and the leadership of the Federal Council of Churches. By looking at Wilson in this framework, Burnidge best understands his neutrality posture, war leadership, and fight for the League of Nations. . . . Recommended.”—Choice

The Purposeful Graduate
Why Colleges Must Talk to Students about Vocation
Tim Clydesdale
“In this book, Clydesdale . . . . argue[s] that colleges and universities can provide an institutional setting that will enable students to develop a sense of long-term purpose in life. . . . The book comprises Clydesdale’s evaluation of research (including data, campus visits, focus groups, interviews, and surveys) from an 88-campus, eight-year initiative of the Lilly Endowment, representing schools with a range of Christian affiliations from evangelical to nominal. He concludes optimistically. . . . Recommended.”—Choice

Crossing Parish Boundaries
Race, Sports, and Catholic Youth in Chicago, 1914-1954
Timothy B. Neary
“Neary has produced a work of wide reach and interest—a history of religion and race, sports and northern urban culture, and youthful engagement around issues of central significance to the mid-twentieth century US society and politics. It is not only exceptionally well researched and analytically careful and illuminative, but also written with an enviable clarity and simplicity of style. Neary helps fill out the storyline of John T. McGreevy’s foundational work on US Catholicism and race.”—James P. McCartin, director, Fordham Center on Religion and Culture
