Literary Hoaxes and Cultural Authenticity
Christopher L. Miller

“Miller takes us on an exciting tour of postcolonial and world literature, guiding us through the literary maze of the real and the pretenders to the real, sorting out fact from fiction in a world where the two are often part of each other. . . . he helps us think through issues of authenticity and false authenticity, identity and stolen identities. In this era of accusations and counteraccusations of fake news, I can’t think of a study more relevant to our times.”—Ngũgĩ wa Thiong’o, author of Wizard of the Crow

States of Terror
History, Theory, Literature
David Simpson

David Simpson offers here a philology of terror, tracking the concept’s long, complicated history across literature, philosophy, political science, and theology—from Plato to NATO. Introducing the concept of the “fear-terror cluster,” Simpson is able to capture the wide range of terms that we have used to express extreme emotional states over the centuries—from anxiety, awe, and concern to dread, fear, and horror. He shows that the choices we make among such words to describe shades of feeling have seriously shaped the attribution of motives, causes, and effects of the word “terror” today, particularly when violence is deployed by or against the state.

French Lessons
A Memoir
Alice Kaplan

With a new Afterword

“Born a Jewish daughter of the American Midwest, Alice Kaplan became a professor of French and an expert on the literature of French fascism. French Lessons is the story of her cultural odyssey, a brave attempt to articulate the compulsions that drove her to embrace foreignness in order to become truly herself. . . . Told in a ‘staccato Midwestern style,’ her story of becoming French is arrestingly all-American.”—Arthur Goldhammer, Washington Post Book World

Loving Literature
A Cultural History
Deidre Shauna Lynch

“[Lynch’s] investigation into the way late-18th- and early 19th-century readers felt and expressed their love of books is beautifully focused. . . . Like so many great arguments—Said’s on Orientalism, Anderson’s on the Nation, Butler’s on Performativity—Lynch’s argument will be loved because it speaks both to and for us, of things we already knew but in terms that are historically astute.”—Los Angeles Review of Books

Enumerations
Data and Literary Study
Andrew Piper
"Enumerations is a landmark. No book has succeeded half so well in bridging the stubborn divide between numbers and letters in literary study. To his Swiss-army-knife proficiency in data science, book history, and close reading, Piper adds a rare measure of generosity and tact. The book extends itself as an open invitation and encouragement to anyone interested in problems of literary method."—James F. English, University of Pennsylvania

Distant Horizons
Digital Evidence and Literary Change
Ted Underwood
Ted Underwood shows how digital archives and statistical tools, rather than reducing words to numbers (as is often feared), can deepen our understanding of issues that have always been central to humanistic inquiry. Without denying the usefulness of time-honored approaches like close reading, narratology, or genre studies, Underwood argues that we also need to read the larger arcs of literary change that have remained hidden from us by their sheer scale. Underwood shows how digital methods can bring into focus the larger landscape of literary history and add to the beauty and complexity we value in literature.

Paper Minds
Literature and the Ecology of Consciousness
Jonathan Kramnick
"Paper Minds places literary study proudly in the company of other university disciplines, both in theory and in practice. Kramnick’s philosophic concerns and his precision about cognition drive brilliant readings that range from all but forgotten landscape poems, to old novels as obscure as The Blazing World or as familiar as Robinson Crusoe, to prize-winning novelists of the present century. He probes the mystery of conscious experience with revelatory lucidity. His aesthetics of craft and the everyday—if perhaps tinged with urban nostalgia—precisely carve out an alternative to the classic aesthetics of distance."—John Bender, Stanford University

Receptive Bodies
Leo Bersani
Leo Bersani, known for his provocative interrogations of psychoanalysis, sexuality, and the human body, centers his latest book around a surprisingly simple image: a newborn baby simultaneously crying out and drawing its first breath. These twin ideas—absorption and expulsion, the intake of physical and emotional nourishment and the exhalation of breath—form the backbone of Receptive Bodies, a thoughtful new essay collection. Bersani illustrates his exploration of the body’s capacities to receive and resist what is ostensibly alien using a typically eclectic set of sources, from the Marquis de Sade to Lars von Trier.

Philology of the Flesh
John T. Hamilton

“With breathtaking historical erudition, exemplary conceptual clarity, and stylistic verve, John Hamilton guides the reader through the carnal career of words in the Western tradition. Taking the Christian notion of the word made flesh, the logos ensarkos, as point of departure, Hamilton elaborates—and put into practice—a theory of language and of that passionate engagement with language we call philology. . . . Hamilton’s remarkable sensitivity to the carnal dimension of this contact is—perhaps paradoxically—nothing less than inspiring.”—Eric L. Santner, University of Chicago

The Forgotten Sense
Meditations on Touch
Pablo Maurette

“[O]ne of the most intelligent, well crafted, and original collection of literary essays that I have had the pleasure to read. Maurette meditates on the many facets of the sense of touch, reflecting on some of its properties, such as pain, pleasure, pressure, temperature, speed, and balance. He then explores how touch has been represented throughout time in portraiture and sculpture, philosophy, and literature, and how it has frequently turned these forms of art into a sensorial feast.”—Enrique García Santo-Tomás, University of Michigan

Crisis of the Sentence
Jan Mieczkowski
To understand what is at stake in thinking—or not thinking—about the sentence, Jan Mieczkowski looks at the difficulties confronting nineteenth- and twentieth-century authors when they tried to explain what a sentence is and what it can do. From Romantic debates about the power of the stand-alone sentence, to the realist obsession with precision and revision, to modernist experiments with ungovernable forms, Mieczkowski explores the hidden allegiances behind our ever-changing stylistic ideals.

Grammars of Approach
Landscape, Narrative, and the Linguistic Picturesque
Cynthia Wall
“This is a stunningly original book. It’s a stroke of genius to link together these three modes of reading—reading a landscape, reading language, and reading the physical appearance of a page. Designs for the Theater of Life
Julia Reinhard Lupton

“This immensely resourceful, deeply inventive book should be a touchstone in Shakespeare Studies and for new humanistic work. It generously affords us new ways of imagining Shakespeare’s astonishingly syncretic dramaturgy. Lupton has already taught us how to think with Shakespeare; here she helps us co-habit the generative locales of his work, bringing together threads of phenomenology, architecture, housekeeping, and theology in a characteristically exuberant set of reflections.”—Sarah Beckwith, Duke University

Shakespeare’s Lyric Stage
Myth, Music, and Poetry in the Last Plays
Seth Lerer

“Within the much-explored territory of Shakespeare’s late plays, Lerer’s book will hold a place of its own for the richness of its scholarship and for the delicacy and originality of its readings. Looking closely at how these plays dramatize the power and limits of lyric voice, he manages beautifully to evoke their strange danger, charm, capaciousness, and doubt.”—Kenneth Gross, author of Shylock Is Shakespeare

Catastrophizing
Materialism and the Making of Disaster
Gerard Passannante
Reaching back to the time between the Renaissance and the Enlightenment, Passannante traces a history of catastrophizing through literary and philosophical encounters with materialism—the view that the world is composed of nothing but matter. Passannante shows how and why the early moderns courted disaster when they ventured beyond the limits of the sensible. He goes on to explore both the danger and the critical potential of thinking catastrophically in our own time.

Someone
The Pragmatics of Misfit Sexualities, from Colette to Hervé Guibert
Michael Lucey
In Someone, Lucey considers characters from twentieth-century French literary texts whose sexual forms prove difficult to conceptualize or represent. The characters expressing these “misfit” sexualities gravitate toward same-sex encounters, yet they differ in subtle but crucial ways from mainstream gay or lesbian identities. Lucey probes both the range of same-sex sexual forms in twentieth-century France and the innovative literary language authors have used to explore these evanescent forms.

A Fortunate Man
Henrik Pontoppidan
Translated by Paul Larkin
With an Afterword by Flemming Behrendt
Per Sidenius seemingly has it all. As the twentieth century dawns, this son of a poor minister has put his sad childhood behind him. It’s then that he begins to have doubts—Sidenius starts to question his life, down to its very foundations. Painting a vast canvas of prewar Europe that stretches from Denmark to Rome, A Fortunate Man is a vital rediscovery, a novel praised by Thomas Mann and Georg Lukács.

Goethe
Journeys of the Mind
Gabrielle Bersier, Nancy Boerner, and Peter Boerner
In his reading, Goethe was the prototypical eighteenth-century armchair traveler, developing knowledge of places both near and far through the words and eyewitness accounts of others. In Goethe: Journeys of the Mind, Nancy Boerner and Gabrielle Bersier explore what it was that made the great writer distinct from his peers and offer insight into the ways that Goethe was able to explore the cultures and environments of places he never saw with his own eyes.

Comedies
Robert Walser
Translated by Daniele Pantano and James Reidel With an Afterword by Reto Sorg
This book brings English-language readers work by Walser in yet another form: dramolette. They present scenes, characters, and situations that comment on the brutality of fairy tales, the impossibilities of love and more.

The Writer’s Map
An Atlas of Imaginary Lands
Edited by Huw Lewis-Jones
With a Prologue by Philip Pullman
“One of life’s great treats, for a lover of books (especially fantasy books), is to open a cover to find a map secreted inside and filled with the details of a land about to be discovered. . . . The Writer’s Map contains dozens of the magical maps writers have drawn or that have been made by others to illustrate the places they’ve created.”—Atlas Obscura

Equestrian Cultures
Horses, Human Society, and the Discourse of Modernity
Edited by Kristen Guest and Monica Mattfeld
“Equestrian Cultures is a highly original work that will make significant contributions to a number of disciplines: art history, economic history, literary studies, animal studies, and environmental studies. The range of topics, material, and methodologies engaged by the essays is extensive, stimulating, and characterized by extremely strong scholarship. There is much to be learned and much to enjoy in this book.”—Pia F. Cuneo, University of Arizona

Sex in the World of Myth
David Leeming
“Destined to become a classic in its field, as searching and humane as the work of Joseph Campbell and so beautiful in its scholarship. Leeming is not merely learned but emotionally profound. Critically, he understands that lack of respect for the female is the great wound at the heart of human sexuality, and this book serves as a starting point to heal it.”—The Australian

Views from the Inside
Edited by Martin Machovec
Translated by Tomáš Liška, Gerald Turner, and Paul Wilson
“An essential selection of texts from and about the Czech underground of the 1970s and 1980s. Key participants provide reflections on an unofficial culture driven by underground rock, samizdat, and civic resistance. The collection is a perfect tool for class work focusing on relations between culture and politics.”—Jindrich Toman, University of Michigan

Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals
A Humorous – Insofar as That Is Possible – Novella from the Ghetto
J. R. Pick
Translated by Alex Zucker and With an Afterword by Jáchym Topol
As moving as it is irreverent, Pick’s novella draws on the two years he spent imprisoned in Terezín in his late teens. With cutting black humor, he shines a light on both the absurdities and injustices of the Nazi-run Jewish ghetto.

“Absurdity and black humor are the very tools of survival, a way through the nightmare. This powerful and moving book helps us make peace with, if not sense of, the unthinkable.”—Los Angeles Review of Books

On War and Writing
Samuel Hynes
“The author persuasively observes that the portrayal of glorious war, propelled by jingoistic propaganda, lured men into battle and was finally repudiated by the meaningless slaughter on the Western front. . . . Hynes, still going strong at the age of 93, has a clear, engaging style—and a mind that is intelligent, perceptive and humane.”—Times Higher Education

Tough Enough
Arbus, Arendt, Didion, McCarthy, Sontag, Weil
Deborah Nelson
Winner of the Modern Language Association James Russell Lowell Prize
“Tough Enough is an important contribution to literary, gender, affect, and trauma studies, and an all-too-timely read in our current political climate, for academic and non-academic readers alike. At a time when the study of the humanities is under threat, Nelson proves, again and again, that analysis of evidence, critical thinking, and argumentation are vital tools for confronting brutal political realities.”—Los Angeles Review of Books
2017 224 p. 6 x 9 7 halftones

Street Players
Black Pulp Fiction and the Making of a Literary Underground
Kinohi Nishikawa
“Street Players is among the rarest of the rare: a work of literary history that makes an important scholarly intervention while at the same time telling a story that will be widely interesting far beyond the halls of an English department. Nishikawa’s groundbreaking original research newly narrates a significant period in twentieth-century African American literature.”—Shane Vogel, Indiana University, Bloomington
2018 288 p. 6 x 9 30 halftones

Evidence of Being
The Black Gay Cultural Renaissance and the Politics of Violence
Darius Bost
“Evidence of Being conjures up late twentieth-century African American struggles for recognition in a society that barely noticed the calamity of the AIDS crisis. Bost assembles an impressive array of original writings and revealing documents that illuminate defiant figures negotiating overlapping structures of prejudice. His book is a black gay interpretive turning point: as readable as it is teachable, as original as it is indispensable.”—Kevin Mumford, author of Not Straight, Not White

Lovable Racists, Magical Negroes, and White Messiahs
David Ikard
With a Foreword by T. Denean Sharpley-Whiting
2019 192 p. 6 x 9
Near/Miss
Charles Bernstein

“Nothing can be truly interesting except the exhaustive,” Thomas Mann wrote a long time ago. Many of these poems suggest a return to that spirit, in a poetry of wit, ideas, and exploration, with both ease and elegance. These are poems you want to put down and pick up again. And when you do, you find something you hadn’t seen last time. It’s a book I’m glad to have. You’ll be glad you have it, too.”—Samuel R. Delany, author of Times Square Red, Times Square Blue

2018 192 p. 6 x 9 6 color plates

Against Translation
Alan Shapiro

“In our difficult times, the need for poetry becomes a hunger. Few living poets speak to our need as deftly and powerfully as Alan Shapiro. Searing, hauntingly sad, often hilarious, these poems—about childhood, aging, the ‘berserk debris’ that our violence leaves in its wake, the way the age-old laws of masculinity banish laughter—reconnect the circuits of the soul, overcharged by its daily news-diet of hatred and polarization.”—Martha C. Nussbaum, University of Chicago

Philosophy, Writing, and the Character of Thought
John T. Lysaker

“This is one of the best books I have read in a while. Powerful and original, it is about writing and not knowing how to write. It is about displacement, and being uprooted, and disorientation. About stuttering, about not knowing one’s way in an argument or how to say it, so that it is to the height of what it is being expressed. It is about how philosophy is homeless, and how just as it has no mother tongue, it also has no distinct or owned, sovereign, genre.”—Eduardo Mendieta, Pennsylvania State University

Stories from the Golden Age of the Red Planet

Edited by Mike Ashley

“These stories are of the highest quality and illustrate how our evolving understanding of the Red Planet changed the way we wrote about it and how Mars came to occupy a prominent position in our hopes, dreams, and fears as the modern age dawned and grew. . . . A fascinating overview of the history of Mars in science fiction, from the birth of the genre through the beginning of the space age.” —Booklist

Fairies

A Dangerous History

Richard Sugg

“An instant classic: one of our best books on the supernatural past and present.” —Simon Young, coauthor of Magical Folk: British and Irish Fairies 500 AD to the Present

“Sugg provides both a richly entertaining introduction to the history of fairyland and a thoughtful exploration of the nature of belief. This book may not make you believe in fairies, but it will make you appreciate why such beliefs should be taken seriously.” —Darren Oldridge, University of Worcester
