Palma Africana
Michael Taussig

“Palma Africana tells the tale of a swamp thing becoming a plantation thing, but never quite. Taussig’s stunning, serpentine ethnography tracks how state and global market forces cannibalize each other to generate the Colombian palm oil plantation complex. Winding through stories of murderous paramilitaries, cattlemen-become-drugmen, and dispossessed subsistence farmers seeking to recompose interspecies intimacies, this vital book opens our senses to the ongoing work of human-animal-plant resistance in the age of dark biocapital.”—Stefan Helmreich, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Creativity on Demand
The Dilemmas of Innovation in an Accelerated Age
Eitan Y. Wilf

Business consultants everywhere preach the benefits of innovation—and promise to help businesses reap them. But what kind of promises does the notion of innovation entail? What is it about the ideology and practice of business innovation that has made these consulting firms so successful at selling their services to everyone from small start-ups to Fortune 500 companies? Most important, what does business innovation actually mean for work and our economy in general in 2019? In Creativity on Demand, cultural anthropologist Eitan Wilf seeks to answer these questions by returning to the fundamental and pervasive expectation of continual business innovation.

Savages, Romans, and Despots
Thinking about Others from Montaigne to Herder
Robert Launay

“Original, persuasive, and accessible, Savages, Romans, and Despots offers a fascinating narrative on ideas of time, space, and history—both of the observer and of the observed society. Launay’s strong sense of history and context in the study of anthropology’s prehistory effectively relinks anthropology to wider currents in contemporary social thought.”—Dale F. Eickelman, Dartmouth College

Living in the Stone Age
Reflections on the Origins of a Colonial Fantasy
Danilyn Rutherford

“In this arresting meditation on a colonial fantasy and anthropology’s paradoxical complicity with it, Rutherford carves out an affective space constituted by and shared among Papuans and their generations of Western interlocutors. Sympathy, humiliation, vulnerability, fear, and fascination are at the very core of those relations. Constituted by degrees of dependence and control, intimacy and inference, coercion and care, these sentiments also provide the sustenance for a better, more ethical, future anthropology.”—Ann Laura Stoler, The New School for Social Research
Beyond Debt
Islamic Experiments in Global Finance
Daromir Rudnyckyj
“This book sets a new standard for the ethnography of global finance with its detailed account of contemporary financial practices in a non-Western context. In addition, Rudnyckyj pays equal attention to infrastructure, cultural styles, and expert discourses. Beyond Debt is a major corrective to our dominant Euro-American understandings of debt, equity, risk, and profit, and thus offers new ideas for both theory and practice.”—Arjun Appadurai, New York University

What the Foucault?
Marshall Sahlins
This is the long-awaited fifth edition of Marshall Sahlins’s classic series of bons mots, ruminations, and musings on the ancients, anthropology, and much else in between. It’s been twenty-five years since Sahlins first devised some after-dinner entertainment at a decennial meeting of the Association of Social Anthropologists in Great Britain. What the Foucault? contains all the old chestnuts, but has been thoroughly updated, and is laced through with all the wit and wisdom we’ve come to expect.

The Human Body in the Age of Catastrophe
Brittleness, Integration, Science, and the Great War
Stefanos Geroulanos and Todd Meyers
“A shared concept of human individuality lies at the heart of intellectual traditions as varied as psychoanalysis, cybernetics, and medical humanism: an individuality knowable only at the moment of its collapse. This is the remarkable argument of The Human Body in the Age of Catastrophe, a provocative and poignant book. . . . Geroulanos and Meyers have given us a model for writing intellectual history.”—Deborah Coen, Yale University

Critical Terms for Animal Studies
Edited by Lori Gruen
“This book’s standout feature is its analysis of animal studies terms across a wide array of disciplines and theoretical perspectives, ranging from anthropology and activism to biology and law. Although animal studies has been interdisciplinary from its beginnings, this volume considerably expands and deepens that interdisciplinary vision.”—Matthew Calarco, California State University, Fullerton

Writing the World of Policing
The Difference Ethnography Makes
Edited by Didier Fassin
“[S]cholars from across the globe explore the institution of policing. The authors discuss policing in South Africa, India, Taiwan, Mozambique, Turkey, Chile, Bolivia, Thailand, Portugal, France, and the US. . . . This book breaks from the trend by taking an ethnographic approach to examining police and policing. . . . Highly recommended.”—Choice

Synthetic
How Life Got Made
Sophia Roosth
“Addresses the current state of a long-standing cultural argument about the conditions in which you can know the world. Does the artificial belong to a different order from the natural, or, as synthetic biologists now maintain, can you only know what you can make? The result is both brilliant anthropology and vivid reporting from the research front.”—Steven Shapin, author of The Scientific Life

The Invention of Culture
Roy Wagner
With a New Foreword by Tim Ingold
“The way in which Wagner unlocked Western conventions of thinking and writing, revealing what is always on the other side, remains foundational to anthropology’s aspirations to be a critical discipline. It is conceptually, persistently radical. Here twenty-first century readers have a particular advantage: in seeing through the language and form of a book that is obviously of its time, they will find its enduringly significant insights still ahead of its time.”—Marilyn Strathern, University of Cambridge

The Seductions of Quantification
Measuring Human Rights, Gender Violence, and Sex Trafficking
Sally Engle Merry
“The Seductions of Quantification is an important book. . . . Merry’s critical lens calls attention to the political process and power dimensions that generate these constructions but remain hidden as they become deployed as truth about what is ‘real.’ This is a major achievement.”—Michael McCann, University of Washington
Chicago Series in Law and Society
A Fistful of Shells
West Africa from the Rise of the Slave Trade to the Age of Revolution
Toby Green

With A Fistful of Shells, Toby Green transforms our view of West and West-Central Africa by tracing the factors that led to African nations’ current economic marginalization. The book offers a new perspective on this through the way in which the currencies that circulated on the continent lost relative value over time in comparison with “hard” currencies in use elsewhere. Over time, Africa’s economic stature declined as the value of surplus slave labor in the New World came to outpace the value of any currency.

Living Politics in South Africa's Urban Shacklands
Kerry Ryan Chance

“Chance’s discussion of ‘living politics’ in these communities, of protest movements and other attempts to organize against authority, is much needed, especially as a great deal of published research about Africa and South Africa is about institutions and politics at the level of the state; too few researchers have managed effectively to capture, as Chance has done, the pursuits and existential being of those millions who live on the urban fringe. Essential.”—Choice

Knot of the Soul
Madness, Psychoanalysis, Islam
Stefania Pandolfo

“Reading this book is both an intellectual and an aesthetic experience. Pandolfo’s subtle and nuanced rendering of the meandering life of reason, unreason, terror, and hope is unparalleled in anthropological and psychiatric literature. Her deep knowledge of Islamic theology and poetry, her mastery over anthropological and psycho-analytical theory, and, above all, her capacity to listen, show what an anthropological devotion to the world might mean.”—Veena Das, Johns Hopkins University

The Trials of Mrs. K.
Seeking Justice in a World with Witches
Adam Ashforth

“Ashforth has written a marvelous, original book that brings together the rich ethnographic qualities of his memoir, Madumo, and the trenchant political analyses of his monograph, Witchcraft, Violence, and Democracy in South Africa. His investigation of the ‘modernity of witchcraft’ clearly demonstrates that witchcraft is squarely of the here and now and profoundly present in the everyday lives of the ordinary Malawians whose stories the text pursues.”—Katherine Luongo, Northeastern University

Reluctant Landscapes
Historical Anthropologies of Political Experience in Siin, Senegal
Francois G. Richard

“African historical archaeology is brought to a new dimension with this penetrating account of the landscapes of Siin in Senegal. Richard blends ethnography, history, and archaeology to unravel the intricacies of politics, everyday life, and history in an African peasant landscape. He does so while debunking colonial myths and postcolonial representations—always with a keen eye for the material world. Reluctant Landscapes eloquently shows how the margin can rewrite the center and how the past might illuminate the present.”—Alfredo González-Ruibal, Institute of Heritage Sciences and Spanish National Research Council

Islam and the Rule of Justice
Image and Reality in Muslim Law and Culture
Lawrence Rosen

In the West, we tend to think of Islamic law as an arcane and rigid legal system, bound by formulaic texts yet suffused by unfettered discretion. With Islam and the Rule of Justice, Lawrence Rosen analyzes a number of such misperceptions. Drawing on specific cases, he explores the application of Islamic law to the treatment of women (who win most of their cases), the relations between Muslims and Jews (which frequently involve close personal and financial ties), and the structure of widespread corruption (which played a key role in prompting the Arab Spring).

African Exodus
Migration and the Future of Europe
Asfa-Wossen Asserate
Translated by Peter Lewis
With a Foreword by David Goodhart

“Aserate’s short book is a plea for joined-up thinking on migration.”—Financial Times

“Amid the hysteria and distortions that surround immigration, in African Exodus Asfa-Wossen Asserate presents a sober and authoritative account of migration from Africa—and manages, with some verve, to unearth central and crucial insights. This book, really, is about the universal human desire to be free.”—Alex Perry author of The Rift: A New Africa Breaks Free

Rethinking Magic and Kinship from the Trobriands
Mark S. Mosko
With a Foreword by Eduardo Viveiros de Castro
“This erudite and timely volume radically inverts much of the anthropological canon by offering a reinterpretation of Trobriand society that yields powerful new insights into kinship, magic, procreation, knowledge, representation and life itself. It is consequently an ethnography which has implications far beyond anthropology through its bold insistence that we acknowledge more fully the inextricability of any form of analytic category from the social context in which it is embedded.”—Sarah Franklin, editor of Marilyn Strathern’s Before and After Gender

An Anthropology of the Machine
Tokyo’s Commuter Train Network
Michael Fisch
“Fisch’s remarkable book takes us into the web of Tokyo’s hyper-massive train network, as his technography shows us how to mind the gap between communication and transportation, technicity and technology, life and death. Fisch has produced not only a strikingly original study of an emergent mode of techno-social organization, but also a powerful meditation on ethical responsibility for our contemporary technological condition.”—Marilyn Ivy, Columbia University

The Story of Radio Mind
A Missionary’s Journey on Indigenous Land
Pamela E. Klassen
“The Story of Radio Mind is a stunning account. . . . Klassen has written a truly innovative book of the intersecting worlds of religion, nationalism, indigeneity, and technology in the late-nineteenth to early-twentieth century. Klassen shows how Du Vernet was transformed by these intersections and how Du Vernet’s encounters with the ‘spiritual energies of the land on which he lived’ impacted his version of Christianity.”

Culture and the Course of Human Evolution
Gary Tomlinson
Tomlinson places front and center the emergence of culture and the human capacities to create it, in a fashion that expands the conceptual framework of recent evolutionary theory. His wide-ranging vision encompasses arguments on the development of music, modern technology, and metaphysics. At the heart of these developments, he shows, are transformations in our species’ particular knack for sign-making. With its innovative synthesis of humanistic and scientific ideas, this book will be an essential text.

Social Theory Now
Edited by Claudio E. Benzecry, Monika Krause, and Isaac Ariail Reed
“The world needs good social theory now more than ever, and this book is a great beginning. The ideas and arguments are young and fresh, ready to be incorporated as well as further developed by readers from all over the world and with different interests. Social Theory Now is perfect for use in undergraduate courses in all of the social sciences—from sociology to economics.”—Richard Swedberg, Cornell University

Mistrust
An Ethnographic Theory
Matthew Carey
“Carey’s book poses an important and provocative question: what happens to our descriptions of sociality when we move mistrust to the foreground and trust to the background? Can mistrust be the founding stone of a positive sociality rather than its failure? The author addresses this theoretical question through a witty and lively exploration of ethnographic vignettes, extracted from his own fieldwork in the Moroccan High Atlas Mountains. A highly original short book.”—Carlos Fausto, author of Warfare and Shamanism in Amazonia

Two Lenins
A Brief Anthropology of Time
Nikolai Ssorin-Chaikov
“Two Lenins is an ethnographically rich work on comparative exchange and temporalities within and across the hidden interfaces between the realm of bureaucracy (represented by Lenin, the Soviet leader) and the life of the people in remote regions (a Siberian hunter named Lenin). This is an exemplary work towards the development of a comparative anthropology of the formal sectors in their historical and local agency.”—Jane Guyer, author of Legacies, Logics, Logistics: Essays in the Anthropology of the Platform Economy

On Kings
David Graeber and Marshall Sahlins

“Graeber and Sahlins’ On Kings—a dialogue, not a union—takes Divine Kingship from its burial ground in the classics and puts it deep into enduring concerns about the brutality of political processes over the long haul of human history, ancient and current in ever new forms. In case studies of sovereign rulers conceived as gods, demons, nurslings, ancestral guests, and populist heroes—ultimate strangers—Graeber and Sahlins invite us to reconsider the nature of tyranny from inside the tiger’s many mouths and to ask how we might, for once, refuse the king his long customary seat at the table.”—Gillian Feeley-Harnik, author of The Lord’s Table: The Meaning of Food in Early Judaism and Christianity

Going Public
A Guide for Social Scientists
Arlene Stein and Jessie Daniels
Illustrations by Corey Fields

“Going Public is a lucid, stepwise breakdown of what you need to do to get your work out there. Stein and Daniels target social scientists, but their advice applies to any academic who wants to approach a general audience. They show how to devise a pitch (your spiel for editors and other gatekeepers), a peg (something that connects your pitch to current events), and a hook (the bit that will really catch an editor’s attention). They explain how to identify opportunities in the public sphere—to recognize when you can leap into the news cycle.”—Chronicle of Higher Education

The Waterless Sea
A Curious History of Mirages
Christopher Pinney

“Under the rubric of ‘real but not true,’ Pinney explores the enchanting enigma of fata morgana, or mirages, visions of cities in the sky or stately mansions floating on fantastic oceans in deserts and polar wastes. . . . Through accounts such as the sfumato of Japanese representations of the fabulous island of Horai, bathed in the breath of a giant clam, Pinney provides an extraordinary tour of the union of refraction and the imagination.”—Jonathan Lamb, Vanderbilt University

Museum Object Lessons for the Digital Age
Haidy Geismar

Museum Object Lessons for the Digital Age urges readers to question their assumptions through four wide-ranging chapters, each focused on a single object—a box, a pen, an effigy, and a cloak. The book begins with an introduction exploring the legacies of older forms of media and earlier museum practices of collection and then offers a critical analysis of contending theories of knowledge production in museums as it relates to digital projects.
