Secrets of the Universe
How We Discovered the Cosmos
Paul Murdin

“If your interest in astronomy has been flagging, this is the book to reignite your sense of wonder. . . . This is a marvelous overview of astronomy, from its colorful history to today’s hottest topics. . . . This is a storyteller’s history of astronomy, constructed like a collection of short stories that invites readers to delve in at any point. Murdin approaches each subject with passion, insight, and explanations that make the most complex topics—relativity, gravitation, cosmology—not just accessible, but completely absorbing.”—Ad Astra

The Science of Stress
Living Under Pressure
Edited by Gregory L. Fricchione, Ana Ivkovic, and Albert S. Yeung

Persistent stress is directly linked to chronic ailments like heart disease, diabetes, and depression. The book uses science to offer innumerable insights on the personal and social causes of stress and the physiological effects they have, and shows how to alleviate stress and properly take care of ourselves. Topics include stress and women’s health, stress and the immune system, stress and social well-being, and stress and sleep.

The History of Continental Philosophy
Edited by Alan D. Schrift

“While Gilles Deleuze complained that ‘the history of philosophy plays a patently repressive role’ in philosophical education, this outstanding eight-volume work will have the opposite effect on readers. It opens up new vistas and possibilities by bringing canonical figures (Kant, Hegel, Nietzsche, Heidegger, Sartre, Derrida), the necessary supporting cast (Herder, Schelling, Kierkegaard, Peirce), and marginal voices (Freud, Dostoevsky, utopian socialists, black existentialists) often given short shrift in less comprehensive histories into sharp focus.”—Choice

The Night of the Physicists
Operation Epilon: Heisenberg, Hahn, Weizäcker and the German Bomb

Richard von Schirach

In the spring of 1945 the Allies arrested the physicists they believed had worked on the German nuclear program. Operation Epilon sought to determine how close Nazi Germany had come to building an atomic bomb. This is the story of Nazi Germany’s hunt for a nuclear bomb. It is a tale of the genius and guilt of lauded, respected scientists.

D-Day Through French Eyes
Normandy 1944

Mary Louise Roberts

“Mary Louise Roberts uses the diaries and memoirs of French civilians to narrate a history of the French at D-Day that has for too long been occluded by the mythology of the allied landing. . . . For the French, liberation meant American heroes—and personal accounts. . . . [it] . . . accompanied these accounts of destruction is a stunning collection of photos and documents.”—Publishers Weekly

The Nazi, the Painter and the Forgotten Story of the SS Road
G. H. Bennett

“An excellent account of an episode that brings together the Holocaust and Nazi plans for the Ukraine. Truly impressive use of new material. The purposes as well as cruelty of Nazi road-building emerges clearly. Very harsh conditions for the enslaved workers. The dependence of Nazi plans on the flow of war is also a clear conclusion.”—The Historical Association

Knossos and the Prophets of Modernism
Cathy Gere

“Cathy Gere re-creates a century of bizarre misreadings of the nearly unknown ancient culture of Crete, and in doing so has produced that rarest of literary surprises: a genuinely hilarious work of Minoan historiography. . . . Gere tells some outlandish stories, but she never makes the protagonists themselves ridiculous.”—Harper’s

Two Underdogs and a Cat
Three Reflections on Communism

Slavenka Drakulic

“This little book looks at life after communism in Eastern Europe from the points of view of three animals: the resident mouse in Prague’s Museum of Communism, the oldest dog in Bucharest and a pompous female cat called Gorby from Warsaw, the pet of an 86-year-old woman now on trial for his activities under communist rule. . . . [it] . . . tackles difficult and complex questions about the nature of morality, responsibility and history.”—Sydney Morning Herald

Reluctant Meister
How Germany’s Past is Shaping Its European Future
Stephen Green
“For Stephen Green, Germany’s greatest achievement has been in coming to terms with its history. ‘The process of confrontation has been neither easy nor quick,’ he says. ‘There are many who have gone to their graves without being honest to themselves about their sins of omission and commission. But for all its imperfections, this atonement has been more thoroughgoing than in most other countries where human evil has been rampant within living memory.’ It would be hard to put it better.”—Financial Times

From Downing Street to the Trenches
First-hand Accounts from the Great War, 1914–1916
Mike Webb
With a Foreword by Hew Strachan
From Downing Street to the Trenches gathers eyewitness accounts and photographs that vividly convey the lived experience of World War I. In addition to political figures, the book draws on local records to paint a highly personal and immediate picture of the war as it was happening to real people in real time.

The Atheist’s Bible
The Most Dangerous Book That Never Existed
Georges Minois
Translated by Lys Ann Weiss
“Just as in Umberto Eco’s novel The Prague Cemetery, if you create false evidence in order to discredit your enemies. . . you will soon find people eager not only to believe you but also to serve the cause you have been trying to undermine. The text that is the object of Georges Minois’ study, the Treatise of the Three Impostors, provides a perfect illustration of this peculiar dynamics of deceit, credulity and paranoia.”—Times Higher Education

Divas in the Convent
Nuns, Music, and Defiance in Seventeenth-Century Italy
Craig A. Monson
 “[A] rich tapestry of cultural life, religious history, and gender politics that puts Whooppi Goldberg’s she-nanigans in Sister Act to shame. . . Monson has rescued Vizzana and her colleagues from obscurity. Read Divas in the Convent as a reminder of music’s power to uplift, to challenge, and to transform.”—James McAuley, Washington Post

The Odyssey of Ibn Battuta
Uncommon Tales of a Medieval Adventurer
David Waines
Ibn Battuta was one of the world’s truly great travelers. A contemporary of Marco Polo, he left an account in his own words of his remarkable journeys throughout the Islamic world and beyond. “Beyond a highly nuanced account of Ibn Battuta’s travels, Waines also offers his readers a sophisticated platform upon which to develop further analyses of medieval travel literature.”—Vincent Barletta, Stanford University

The White Devil
The Werewolf in European Culture
Matthew Beresford
“The White Devil is informative and entertaining, filled with grisly anecdotes and case histories, religious, social, and medical interpretations, both credible and laughable. It leaves us wanting to know more. This is serious scholarship expressed in an easy, readable prose that examines the phenomenon from its beginnings with the tribal shaman all the way through to the legend’s popularization in film and television.”—New York Journal of Books

The Baker Who Pretended to Be King of Portugal
Ruth MacKay
“MacKay examines how an Augustinian vicar, a nun of royal descent, and a baker (pasteleria) conspired to expel the ‘distressed’ Spanish King Philip II from his newly inherited kingdom of Portugal. MacKay employs a keen scholarly style as she follows the murky details, widely disseminated in both written and oral form, as they circulated through a parietic popular yearning to break free of Spanish hegemony.”—Library Journal

Cabinet's Finest Hour
The Hidden Agenda of May 1940
David Owen

“It is the prime achievement of this authoritative book that it shows how Churchill was able to harness the forces of collective decision-making in order to fight off a last fatal attempt at appeasement and give himself the mandate necessary for ultimately victorious prosecution of the war. This is an inspiring and instructive and ever-timely testament to a master politician literally saving his nation—and mankind—from catastrophe.”—Martin Rubin, Washington Times

Somewhere in England
American Airmen in the Second World War

Celebrates the Americans who served as part of the USAAF in England, offering an unprecedented look at that group of airmen and support staff, and their effects on the communities in which they were stationed. Drawing on the 15,000 photographs in the Roger Freeman collection, the Imperial War Museum has assembled a book that shows us the USAAF at work and play, including a large number of photographs in color.

The English and Their Country
Thomas Burke

“This pamphlet, first written in 1944 and republished by the Imperial War Museum, shows how American newcomers were indwelt into the weird and wonderful ways of the English with an official guide. Among the tips in the leaflet include advice on overcoming their reserve, unleashing their inner romantic poet and even an explanation of why they are so obsessed with the weather.”—Daily Telegraph

Hesitant Comrades
The Irish Revolution and the British Labour Movement
Geoffrey Bell

“Bell has written the definitive account of the response of the British Labour movement to the Easter Rising and Irish War of Independence. He breaks considerable new ground, illuminating the attitudes taken up by the trade union and socialist movements. His work is a fine example of politically committed scholarship and makes an important contribution to both the histories of the Irish Revolution and of the British Left.”—John Newsinger, Bath Spa University

A Very Queer Family Indeed
Sex, Religion, and the Bensons in Victorian Britain
Simon Goldhill

“Child brides, cousin marriage, generational antagonisms, polyamory, lesbianism, homosexuality, all served with heavy dollops of graphomaniac and religious fervor—what could be more Victorian? . . . [F]or the Victorians, nothing was more normal—or more agonizing—than queerness.”—Sharon Marcus, author of Between Women: Friendship, Desire, and Marriage in Victorian England

Dangerous Work
Diary of an Arctic Adventure
Arthur Conan Doyle
Edited by Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower

“What does Dangerous Work have in common with Moby-Dick? . . . Both books disguise great depth beneath the cloak of an adventure story. Both offer accounts of what was once a major industry, comparable in relative terms to today’s oil industry. Both should be read from cover to cover, shared with friends and revisited in front of a warm fire.”—New York Times Book Review

General Sterling Price and the Confederacy
Thomas C. Reynolds
Edited by Robert G. Schultz
Sterling Price began his career as commander of the Missouri State Guard, then served as a major general in the Confederate army during the Civil War. In 1867, Lieutenant Governor Thomas C. Reynolds began writing his version of events. The manuscript was never completed, possibly because of the death of Sterling Price in St. Louis. In 1898, the Reynolds text was discovered and donated to the Missouri Historical Society. Now for the first time, the entire, although unfinished, manuscript is available.

Sterling Price and the Confederacy
Edited by Robert G. Schultz
Sterling Price began his career as commander of the Missouri State Guard, then served as a major general in the Confederate army during the Civil War. In 1867, Lieutenant Governor Thomas C. Reynolds began writing his version of events. The manuscript was never completed, possibly because of the death of Sterling Price in St. Louis. In 1898, the Reynolds text was discovered and donated to the Missouri Historical Society. Now for the first time, the entire, although unfinished, manuscript is available.

Nut Country
Right-Wing Dallas and the Birth of the Southern Strategy
Edward H. Miller

“Miller details how a combination of newfound wealth, a sudden rise of the middle class (which allowed for a single breadwinner and freed wives to dabble in politics), and the need for new residents to assimilate, resulted in a highly conservative political stance riddled with deep-seated racism and ‘conspiratorial’ John Bircher thinking. . . . An insightful examination of a political shift that endures to this day.”—Publishers Weekly

Philip Sparrow Tells All
Lost Essays by Samuel Steward, Writer, Professor, Tattoo Artist
Edited by Jeremy Mulderig

With a Foreword by Justin Spring

“Steward, a once-neglected figure in queer history, palled around with Gertrude Stein, kept a ‘stud file’ of his sexual conquests, and ran a successful tattoo parlor catering to sailors. In 1944, he was asked by his dentist, the editor for the Illinois Dental Journal, to write a column providing a ‘worm’s-eye view’ of dentistry. The essays that followed, under the pen name Philip Sparrow, were elegantly constructed, bitingly funny, and likely to be utterly baffling to the original readership.”—Publishers Weekly

Alaska’s Hidden Wars
Secret Campaigns on the North Pacific Rim
Otis Hays Jr.

The Aleutians and the Kuriles became the focus of a series of major campaigns that pitted the Americans against the Japanese. This book chronicles the role of Japanese-American intelligence specialists and reveals a Japanese eyewitness account of the defense of Attu. Two virtually unknown aspects of the North Pacific war are also exposed: the brutal North Pacific weather and the imprisonment of American airmen in Kamchatka.

A Philosophy of Freedom
Lars Svendsen
Translated by Kerri Pierce
Taking a broad approach across metaphysics, politics, and ethics, Lars Svendsen explores the question of freedom while also looking at the threats freedom faces today. Though our behaviors, thoughts, and actions are restricted by social and legal rules, deadlines, and burdens, Svendsen argues that the fundamental requirement for living a human life is the ability to be free. 2014 286 p. 6 x 9

Islam and the West
A Conversation with Jacques Derrida
Mustapha Chëhir
Translated by Teresa Lavender Fagan
With a Foreword by Giovanna Borradori
Islam and the West is a crucial opportunity to further our understanding of Derrida’s views on the key political and religious divisions of our time, and an often moving testament to the power of friendship and solidarity to surmount them.

Heidegger and the Myth of a Jewish World Conspiracy
Peter Trawny
Translated by Andrew J. Mitchell
“You don’t spend years working your way through Being and Time because you’re idly interested. You do it because you think that, by reading it, you might learn something precious and indispensable. The Black Notebooks, however seriously you take them, are a betrayal of that ardency. They make it harder to care about—and, therefore, to really know—heidegger’s ideas. Even if his philosophy isn’t contaminated by Nazism, our relationship with him is.”—New Yorker, on the German edition

Arendt and America
Richard H. King
“King’s great contribution to the literature on Arendt is to show, in fine-grained terms, how her political theory was the result of a quintescentially American experience: to arrive on American shores an immigrant, to draw on resources from both an old country and a new, imagined one, and to participate in the riot of reinvention.”—Los Angeles Review of Books

After the Beautiful
Hegel and the Philosophy of Pictorial Modernism
Robert B. Pippin
“Pippin uses the work of Manet and Cezanne (the grandfather and father of modernism) to embark on a kind of philosophical time travel with Hegel. Pippin persuasively argues that Hegel’s thought remains relevant for helping one understand the achievements of modernist painting as philosophical achievements.”—Choice

Juvenescence
A Cultural History of Our Age
Robert Pogue Harrison

Robert Pogue Harrison ranges brilliantly across cultures and history, tracing the ways that the spirits of youth and age have inflected each other from antiquity to the present. Ours is a time, he argues, of startling juvenescence.

“...not that I’d sell my shirt for any living critic. But if there had to be one, it would unquestionably be Harrison.”—Spectator

Walter Benjamin
An Introduction to His Work and Thought
Uwe Steiner
Translated by Michael Winkler

“This book is the product of a career spent thinking about Benjamin. Steiner is able not just to open up major works and concepts, but to show, in very short compass, their place in a complex cultural field. His ability to combine deep reading with broad contextualization is the ideal combination for a critical introduction to this major thinker.”—Michael Jennings, Princeton University

Wisdom
A History
Trevor Curnow

Drawing on examples from a diversity of eras and places—from ancient Egypt to medieval Europe to modern Africa—Trevor Curnow explores the ways we have sought to overcome the problems posed by our existence with a steadfast wisdom. He shows how we have placed it within the vehicle of the proverb, which has safeguarded its lessons throughout time and across cultures.

Nietzsche, Psychology, and First Philosophy
Robert B. Pippin

“Pippin presents a much-needed new approach and appreciation of Nietzsche. . . . [He] adroitly starts fresh with Nietzsche, considering his work holistically and in the context of both early psychology and 19th-century French morality. In his novel reading, Pippin exposes the folly of underappreciating Nietzsche’s irony and self-criticism.”—Choice

Globes
400 Years of Exploration, Navigation, and Power
Sylvia Sumira
“A beautifully photographed tour of the British Library’s collection of globes, most of which date from the early sixteenth century to the nineteenth century. There are terrestrial globes, celestial globes, pocket globes, globes of the moon, and a decadent blue globe made in China in the early 1600s. Most of the globes were made with a scientific purpose, to aid navigation, or to demonstrate the parallax of the moon. But together, they suggest something beyond precision: a reverent effort to make sense of the mysterious place we plant our feet.”—Boston Globe Brainiac Blog

Plans of Chicago
Robert Samuel Roche and Aric Lascher
Plans of Chicago uses the 1909 Plan as a precedent for reconnecting Chicago’s center to outlying suburbs. As in Burnham’s Plan, improved transportation and park systems will make Chicago both “the city that works” and a “City Beautiful.” With 130 exquisite illustrations, including reproductions of Jules Guerin’s famous watercolors—collected here in full color for the first time—as well as original drawings by Aric Lascher, Plans of Chicago offers practical, viable proposals for city living and charts a path for Chicago’s future.

Antony Gormley on Sculpture
Antony Gormley
Edited by Mark Holborn
Antony Gormley is the creator of public installations such as Event Horizon, a collection of thirty-one life-size casts of the artist’s body, and Field, formed by tens of thousands of standing clay figures overflowing across a room’s floor. Combining commentary on his own works with discussions of other artists and the Eastern religious traditions that have inspired him, Gormley offers wisdom on topics ranging from the human body in space, how to approach an environment when conceiving its installation, and bringing mindfulness and internal balance to sculpture.

From Silverpoint to Silver Screen
Andy Warhol 1950s Drawings
Edited by Daniel Blau
Andy Warhol was a skilled draftsman, who filled numerous sketchbooks with freehand drawings of still-life objects and friends. This book collects more than one hundred early sketchbooks drawings produced by Warhol during his first years in New York. Dating from the 1950s, the drawings exhibit a profound technical ability completed in Warhol’s characteristic blotted-line technique and offer a glimpse into a moment of great uncertainty in his life and artistic career.

Caravaggio
Patrick Hunt

Caravaggio was the most revolution- ary artist of the Italian Baroque. The intensity and drama of his chiaroscuro style is matched only by his life. Outlaw, heretic, murderer and sensualist are some of the charges brought against him by his contemporaries. Beyond his penchant for idealized representations of life, Caravaggio’s work addressed a number of issues that are as compelling today as they were in the early seventeenth century.

Esprit Montmartre
Bohemian Life in Paris around 1900
Edited by Max Hollein and Ingrid Pfeiffer

“Around 1900, the bohemian quarter of Montmartre on the outskirts of Paris attracted what is today an all-star lineup of artists: Edgar Degas, Pablo Picasso, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, and Vincent van Gogh. They arrived, seeking new ideas and new subjects. Their paintings captured not only the cozy corner cafes they frequented but also the can-cans dancers and the raucous nightlife at the legendary Moulin Rouge. Jean-Antoine Houdon

Sculptor of the Enlightenment

Anne L. Poulet

With contributions by Guilhem Scherf, Ulrike D. Mathies, Christoph Frank, Claude Vandalle, Dean Walker, and Monique Barbler

“(The essays) detail Houdon’s artistic development and provide insights into his working methods and his relationships with his subjects, a group that included Molère, Diderot, Voltaire, Franklin and Napoleon. . . . He could do teeth, the pupils of the eyes, soft dimples, even tears; details that, two centuries later, still catch the breath.”—New York Times

Gold

Kathryn Jones, Lauren Porter, and Jennifer Scott

Drawing on the Royal Collection’s collection of paintings, miniatures, jewelry, gold boxes, and drawings in and on gold, the book takes readers from Fabergé’s gold-mounted boxes to the nearly-four-thousand-year-old Rillaton Gold Cup and drawings in gold paint by Edward Burne-Jones. This most precious substance throughout history is presented in one hundred full-color illustrations.

Art Forgery

The History of a Modern Obsession

Thierry Lenain

In this unique history from the Middle Ages to the present, Thierry Lenain examines the genealogy of faking art and interrogates the anxious, often neurotic, reactions triggered in the modern art world by these clever frauds.

That’s the Way It Is A History of Television News in America
Charles L. Ponce de Leon
“Charles Ponce de Leon has written a brisk and informative history of television news since its inception in the late 1940s, covering the more than six decades of TV news from Douglas Edwards to Diane Sawyer, from the Camel News Caravan to Countdown with Keith Olbermann. The narrative moves quickly, yet pauses to offer extended discussions of such topics as the genesis of PBS, the establishment of CNN, the innovations of Roone Arledge at ABC, and the ways that local news helped to reshape the network evening newscasts.” — Chester Pach, Ohio University

Living with the String Quartets
Edward Duninberre
“Dusinberre is the lead violist of the Takacs Quartet, one of the world’s most highly regarded string ensembles, and he has written a fascinating book about the musical life of this group of players. Interwoven with that is the story of Beethoven’s 16 string quartets, works of extraordinary power written over a quarter-century that moved the genre on from the earlier masters.” —Economist 2016 232 p. 5/8 x 8 1/2 14 line drawings 306 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-37436-9 $30.00 CNAM Your Price: $13.00

Richard Wagner
A Life in Music
Martin Geck
Translated by Stewart Spencer
“Geck describes a Wagner who is grounded, focused and even cautious, a savvy realist and ironist rather than a flamboyant, flailing ideologue. . . . Suffused with his readings of contemporary productions of the operas, Geck’s musical analyses are succinct and superb, and he is skilled at finding clues to Wagner in the interstices of his career, like the early rarity ‘Rienzi’ or what he calls ‘the revolutionary drafts’ of never-completed works that Wagner envisioned before embarking on the ‘Ring’ cycle.” —New York Times 2013 464 p. 6 x 9 1/2 43 halftones, 37 line drawings 307 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-92461-8 $35.00 Your Price: $11.00

The Last Asylum
A Memoir of Madness in Our Times
Barbara Taylor
“Taylor provides a gripping (often painful) account of her own experience of madness, a fascinating description of her psychoanalysis, a historical reflection on the role asylums played for inmates and the implications of their demise, and a meditation of the interrelationships between care and cure.”—Los Angeles Review of Books
“A remarkable memoir-hybrid that opens up history from the inside. . . A visceral and supremely intelligent account of [Taylor’s] breakdown and psychoanalytic treatment in the last years of the asylum system.”—Guardian

“Touching on daydreaming, remembering and subconsciously planning for the future, Corballis suggests that the brain is designed for un-focused functionality.”—Publishers Weekly

“Corballis argues that mind wandering isn’t just important for creativity—it’s an essential part of what makes humans unique.”—Focus 2015 184 p. 6 x 9 1 halftone 335 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-23861-6 $20.00 NZ Your Price: $7.00

Curiosity
How Science Became Interested in Everything
Philip Ball
“Curiosity emerges as a first-rate popular account of how science in Europe began. Accurate, witty, and reliable, the book ably shows modern readers how we got to be modern.”—Wall Street Journal 2013 480 p. 6 x 9 38 halftones, 5 line drawings 336 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-04579-5 $35.00 COBE Your Price: $9.00

Relics
Travels in Nature’s Time Machine
Piotr Naskrecki
Foreword by Cristina Goetsch Mittermeier
“Comprises page after page of the most jaw-droppingly spectacular nature photography you’ve ever seen. No matter how compelling Naskrecki’s prose, no matter how insightful his observations or unexpectedly charming his facts, his words reluctantly share pages with his starkly beautiful images of life with all its teeth and colors and scales and spiny legs.”—Scientific American 2011 384 p. 9 1/4 x 11 1/4 414 color plates 338 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-66870-6 $45.00 Your Price: $13.00

The Star-Crossed Stone
The Secret Life, Myths, and History of a Fascinating Fossil
Kenneth J. McNamara
“A fascinating story about sea urchin fossils from Neolithic times to the present. It is much more than a summary of the folklore surrounding a particular fossil, however; it also traces the evolution of myth-making, the human urge to collect, and the development of complex symbolic thought, combining archaeology, paleontology, folklore, and anthropology in wonderful, surprising ways.”—Adrienne Mayor, author of The Poison King: The Life and Legend of Mithradates, Rome’s Deadliest Enemy 2010 280 p. 6 x 9 1/2 20 halftones, 1 line drawing 339 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-51469-7 $27.50 Your Price: $9.00

A Cancer Companion
An Oncologist’s Advice on Diagnosis, Treatment, and Recovery
Ranjan Srivastava
“At last, we have a practical, easy-to-read book by a cancer specialist that provides information and insights about cancer and cancer care to patients, family members, physicians, nurses, and caregivers. Topics discussed in this valuable book include how to find the right oncologist; how to best manage chemotherapy; when to consider a research trial; the role of complementary medicine; predicting treatment outcomes; and ways to manage pain effectively.”—Mark Siegler, University of Chicago 2015 368 p. 6 x 9 340 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-30064-3 $25.00 ANZ Your Price: $10.00

Risky Medicine
Our Quest to Cure Fear and Uncertainty
Robert Aronowitz
“Americans have the most advanced (and expensive) health care—but not the best health. Science and sociology historian Aronowitz suggests that our market-driven, risk-management-focused health care culture has led to excessive tests and overdiagnosis. The cure? Reforming how we think about health and how it’s practiced.”—Discover 2015 288 p. 6 x 9 10 halftones 341 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-04971-7 $20.00 Your Price: $10.00

Catharsis
On the Art of Medicine
Andrzej Szczeklik
Translated by Antonia Lloyd-Jones and with a Foreword by Czeslaw Milosz
“A book about the soul of medicine—and about the relationship of medicine to science.”—Keven Barracough, British Medical Journal
“[Szczeklik] approaches the questions of pain, suffering and death that confront the doctor daily and that the world regards as ‘terrible, futile, and destructive.’”—Niall O’Higgins, Times Higher Education Supplement 2005 172 p. 5 1/2 x 8 1/2 12 line drawings 342 Cloth ISBN: 978-0-226-78869-2 $22.00 Your Price: $8.00

Pollination Power
Heather Angel

“Photographer Angel has traveled the world to document how plants attract pollinators. Her mesmerizing images showcase magenta hibiscus trumpets in Hawaii, stubby Arabian starflower stamens and pollen-covered bees in Tajikistan, as well as beetles, butterflies and birds swooping in to feed. . . . The photographs and text are all tied together in a gorgeous large-format book.”—Scientific American

How Animals Grieve

Barbara J. King

“The title of Dr. King’s book is called How Animals Grieve, not Do Animals Grieve? This is an important distinction because she wants to know how and why various animals grieve—why it has evolved—not if it has evolved. This line of thinking applies to studies of animal emotions in general.”—Psychology Today

The Accidental Species
Misunderstandings of Human Evolution
Henry Gee
“Gee . . . confronts two commonly held views of evolution and effectively demolishes both, persuasively arguing that evolution doesn’t work the way most people believe it does and that the entire concept of ‘human exceptionalism’ (the idea that humans are fundamentally superior to other animals due to ‘language, technology, or consciousness’) is erroneous.” — Publishers Weekly

Galaxy
Mapping the Cosmos
James Geach
“A beautifully illustrated exploration of the Universe beyond the Milky Way and the mysteries and wonders of extragalactic astronomy. Geach is ideally placed to be our guide on this journey—a researcher in the fast-changing field of galaxy evolution, he displays both breadth and depth of knowledge, happily matched by a talent for engaging, nontechnical prose and an eye for a simile.”—Sky at Night Magazine

Becoming a Marihuana User
Howard S. Becker
With a New Preface
“Becker’s classic essay Becoming a Marihuana User... sparkles with insight. ... The idea that one has to learn to be high on cannabis, that the highs users report are not intrinsic and automatic effects of the drug, was completely novel... . Becker was also the first expert to talk about marijuana use, when everyone else called consumption of the drug ‘abuse.’ ... In writing Becoming a Marihuana User, Becker pointed the way toward a more enlightened, rational view of cannabis.”—Andrew Weil, MD

Memory
Encounters with the Strange and the Familiar
John Scanlan
John Scanlan explores the nature of memory and how we have come to live both with and within it, as well as what might come from memory becoming a process as simple as retrieving and reading data. Drawing on history, philosophy, and technology, Memory offers an engaging investigation of how we comprehend recollection and how memory, as a phenomenon, continuallyremakes everyday life.

The Stone Soup Experiment
Why Cultural Boundaries Persist
Deborah Downing Wilson
“The Stone Soup Experiment is the story of an ambitious classroom simulation... . Integrating perspectives on groups, culture, and communication from a broad swath of the social sciences (e.g., psychology, communication studies, sociology, anthropology), the book’s theoretical perspective is fresh. Warning: faculty readers may be inspired to new levels of daring in the classroom... . Highly recommended.”—Choice

Kill It to Save It
An Autopsy of Capitalism’s Triumph over Democracy
Corey Dolgon

“I always love a good whodunit and like a good Agatha Christie mystery, Dolgon’s book peels back the layers of neoliberalism to expose not only the crimes and who committed them, but the weapons they used and the fake alibis they told. Looking for The Stranger
Albert Camus and the Life of a Literary Classic
Alice Kaplan

“To this new project, Kaplan brings equally honed skills as a historian, literary critic, and biographer. . . . In an epilogue, Ms. Kaplan goes a step further and looks for the identity of the Arab involved in the real-life altercation that inspired the novel’s pivotal scene. What she learns about him is fascinating, and how she writes about parallels between him and Camus is a lovely example of her own imaginative powers and stylish prose.”—New York Times

Novelty
A History of the New
Michael North

“Michael North invites us to look anew at the very idea of the new. Ranging across philosophy, science, and art, he teases out the recurring patterns that shape our sense of how newness comes into the world. Under the pressure of North’s sharp gaze and remarkably lucid prose, novelty turns out to be more familiar and yet more surprising than we had known it to be. This is a major contribution to intellectual history.”—Rita Felski, University of Virginia

Nocturne
A Journey in Search of Moonlight
James Attlee

“Attlee is a true enthusiast, and this is a thrillingly written book. He writes beautifully and often thrillingly about the moon in all its phases—almond, waxing crescent, gibbous— and it will be a duff-minded reader who comes away from this book without a new or at least renewed regard for the extraordinary, silver satellite that is our world’s constant companion.”— New York Times

Translated, Edited, and with an Introduction by John Gardner

Woodcuts by Fritz Kreidel

Besides the tale of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, this edition includes two allegorical poems, “Purity” and “Patience”; the beautiful dream allegory “Pearl”; and the miracle story “Saint Erkenwald.”

“Mr. Gardner has translated into modern English and edited a text of these five poems that could hardly be improved. . . . The entire work is preceded by a fine and complete general introduction and a critical commentary on each poem.”— Library Journal

Selected Essays
Friedrich Dürrenmatt

_translated by Isabel Fargo Cole_

The writings featured here are by turns playful and polemical, poetic and provocative, mordantly comic and deadly serious. Suffused with ironies—often hilariously. This is a great writer must be a poet—thinker, very much a poet and a very thinking poet.”— Jacques Derrida

Portrait of a Man
Known as Il Condottiere
Georges Perec

translated with an introduction by David Bellos

_Fans will find here a thriller that combines themes that would remain prominent in Perec’s later work—art forgery, authenticity, and murder._

“A fully realized and mature work of fiction that will provide Perec’s fans a fuller view of his oeuvre, can serve as an accessible entry point for readers who are new to its author.”— New York Journal of Books

Sirens
An Extraordinary Journey in Search of the Extraordinary, Silver Satellite That Is Our World’s Constant Companion
James Attlee

translated by Wieland Hoban

_Those familiar with this particular date in history might feel as if they already know the story of the day Hitler committed suicide, but Kluge weaves a tale of all the events large and small that occurred concurrently. From the momentous political occasions to small tragedies, the examination of one single day demonstrates compellingly how the effects of war radiate out from the big players._— New York Journal of Books

Tomb(e)
Hélène Cixous
translated by Laurent Milesi

_Cixous pierces into the nature of love and jealousy—an oeuvre bound never to be, and yet, at the same time, looks upon the memory of a love that has been. . . . Her illuminating prologue in the new edition situates _Tomb(e) in context with her later works._— *Los Angeles Review of Books*_

“Hélène Cixous is today, in my view, the greatest writer in the French language. And I am weighing my words as I say that. For a great writer must be a poet-thinker, very much a poet and a very thinking poet.”— Jacques Derrida

translated by Bernard Wolfe

_With a new afterword by William T. Vollmann_

“Attlee is a true enthusiast, and this is an excellent book. He writes beautifully and often thrillingly about the moon in all its phases—almond, waxing crescent, gibbous—and it will be a dull-minded reader who comes away from this book without a new or at least renewed regard for the extraordinary, silver satellite that is our world’s constant companion.”— New York Times

Wallis’s War
A Novel of Diplomacy and Intrigue
Kate Auspitz
With a New Postscript by the Author
An imagined memoir of Wallis Simpson, the infamous American divorcée who caused the abdication of the King of England. Was it love? Or was it also some behind-the-scenes engineering? A blend of diplomacy and dalliance, fashion and fascists, this richly researched satirical offers witty and erudite entertainment and leaves us speculating.

“A ingenious twist and just as plausible as the well-researched reality this fictional account deftly uses.”—Daily Mail

The Reprisal
A Novel
Laudomia Bonanni
Translated by Susan Stewart and Sara Teardo

“Bonanni’s tragic, brutal novella is exquisitely translated for the first time by poet Stewart and scholar Teardo. . . . Bonanni’s surreal and grotesque scenes make the madness of the men, and their primordial sexuality, graphically palpable. It is a travesty that English language readers have been denied this pro-found, gritty novel for so long as it raises serious questions about humanity’s ability to justify vio-lence.”—Publishers Weekly

A Book of Liszts
Variations on the Theme of Franz Liszt
John Spurling

“John Spurling’s fictionalized biography, A Book of Liszts, takes the composer at his word and interprets, through fictive conversations and scenarios, much of Liszt’s life to great effect . . . More theatrical than scholarly . . . Spurling’s book offers many pleasures. It fully inhabits the world of Liszt, and is a tremendous achievement.”—Guardian

McKay’s Bees
Thomas McMahon

“McMahon, in such a short novel, should not have been able to bring coherence out of Darwin and Lincoln, bees and machines, East and West, honey and blood. . . . That he manages—that wit, irony, gentleness, passion, and knowledge conspire so successfully—is a wonder of craft.”—New York Times

Aristotle Detective Novels by Margaret Doody

Aristotle and Poetic Justice
“(Aristotle and Poetic Justice) offers satisfactory detection, a well-proportioned story, nostalgia for lovers of Greece, and special fun for classicists. It is a bonus that it is so well written.”—Times Literary Supplement

Aristotle and the Secrets of Life
“With Aristotle and the Secrets of Life, Margaret Doody launches her characters into more troubled, and troubling, waters. Defy weaving together known or likely facts of Aristotle’s biography, from different periods of his life, this time she projects the philosopher himself as the main character of the adventure. . . . There are powerful and sinister forces at work in Athens.”—Times Literary Supplement

The Tunnel of Love
Foreword by D. G. Myers
“A trio of long out-of-print books. . . . underscores the satirical brilliance of a mostly forgotten humorist. De Vries skewed a distinctly male form of idiocy, demonstrated by characters who are witty, well-spoken, and lacking what a later generation would call emotional intelligence.”—Car veter
“the funnest serious writer to be found on either side of the Atlantic.”—Kingsley Amis

America, Compromised
Lawrence Lessig
“There is not a single American awaketo the world who is comfortable with the way things are.” So begins Lawrence Lessig’s sweeping indictment of contemporary American institutions and the corruption that besets them. Through case studies, Lessig shows how institutions are drawn away from higher purposes and toward money, power, quick rewards—the first steps to corruption.

The Human Condition
Second Edition
Hannah Arendt
With an Introduction by Margaret Canovan and a New Foreword by Danielle Allen
“Arendt’s insights into history and politics seem both amazing and obvious.”—Mary McCarthy, New Yorker
“...the combination of tremendous intellectual power with great common sense makes Arendt’s insights to get us to rethink practical matters, and to act in ways that will revive democratic practices through citizen action and institutional reform alike.”—Kirkus Reviews
“...an accomplishment! ... A wonderful and important book, backed by very important and cutting-edge research. I will recommend it widely.”—Jeffrey D. Sachs, Columbia University

Action versus Contemplation
Why an Ancient Debate Still Matters
Jennifer Summit and Blakey Vermeule
“This is a very subtle and surprising book that nevertheless goes down easy. ... There is great generosity of spirit in their writing and thinking, and that generosity will have a salutary effect on all those whose thinking this book will touch. Action versus Contemplation is itself a contemplative document meant to intervene in the world it addresses, to get us to rethink practical matters, and to act in ways that will promote thinking. It urges action as a way of thinking, and thinking as a way of acting, and is a model of what it advocates for.”—William Flesch, Brandeis University

Under the Cover of Chaos
Trump and the Battle for the American Right
Lawrence Grossberg
“This is a timely book, to say the least. Beyond the moment, however, Grossberg’s vision is thought-provoking, stirring, even exciting as well as frightening because it shows that there are new things to say about the morass of American and other democratic politics today and new ways to understand our situation. It’s also a rattling good read.”—Meaghan Morris, University of Sydney

The Politics of Petulance
America in an Age of Immaturity
Alan Wolfe
“Writing with characteristic lucidity and deep care for democracy’s future, Alan Wolfe’s mobilization of intellectual heroes and acute observations about popular suspicion and populist politics, narcissistic leadership and irresponsible simplifications, offers an uncommon exception. By instructing and inspiring, this book’s quest for democratic maturity will stimulate rich conversation about knowledge and responsibility.”—Ira Katznelson, author of Fear Itself

We Have Not a Government
The Articles of Confederation and the Road to the Constitution
George William Van Cleve

“(P)rovides a focused explanation of the reasons the Articles of Confederation, the nation’s first federal constitution, went lurching toward collapse… Van Cleve patiently examines the specific matters of public policy that vexed national politics in the mid-1780s. He draws sharp conclusions and generally takes decided stands on matters that historians still actively dispute… What Van Cleve does demonstrate, persuasively, is that the genuine crisis of the Confederation required creating a ‘staggeringly powerful’ national government through a ‘grand bargain’ that went well beyond what any state might have asked for itself.”—The Washington Post

The Future of Conservation in America
A Chart for Rough Water
Gary E. Machlis and Jonathan B. Jarvis

With a Foreword by Terry Tempest Williams
“There are growing dangers to our most precious civic possessions: the air we breathe; the water we drink; and the land that sustains us. Divisive politics distract us from these common interests. The Future of Conservation in America calls for an enlightened vision for the future. The authors draw from a combined eighty years of public service in conservation and science to chart a course for a new generation of conservation action and leadership.”—President Jimmy Carter

The Art, Craft, and Business of Book Editing
Edited by Peter Ginn
“A vital resource for writers and readers seeking a comprehensive exploration into the author-editor relationship, the lifecycle of a book, and how editors for publishing houses big and small have adapted to an industry in constant flux.”—Library Journal, starred review
2017 320 p. 6 x 9
Your Price: $20.00

A History of Language
Steven Roger Fischer
“Fischer’s intriguing and ambitious study explores a vast terrain, parts of which have scarcely been charted. . . . A stimulating and highly informative inquiry.”—Noam Chomsky, on the first edition
Distributed for Reaktion Books
2018 240 p. 5 x 7 1/4 12 halftones

From the Bodleian Library, with Introductions by John Simpson
The First English Dictionary 1604
Robert Cawdrey’s A Table Alphabeticall
“This is a gnarled, rude, fierce old dictionary and utterly without ‘cal- lidity’ (‘craftiness, or deceit’). It may not provide much ‘clavicles’ (‘mirth’) and it certainly ‘maffles’ (‘stammers’), but it also ‘inanquets’ (‘bewittches’).”—New York Sun 2007 160 p. 5 x 7 1/4
621 Paper ISBN: 978-1-85124-388-4 $15.00 NAM
Your Price: $12.00

The First English Dictionary of Slang, 1699
B. E. Gent
“Thanks to the unearthing of a seventeenth-century text, . . . we can now learn the sorts of word-sounds heard on the streets of London by the likes of John Milton, Andrew Marvell and probably even Shakespeare himself.”—Wall Street Journal 2010 224 p. 5 x 8
622 Paper ISBN: 978-1-85124-387-7 $15.00 NAM
Your Price: $12.00

The Victorian Dictionary of Slang & Phrase
J. Redding Ware
“Nobody who appreciates the history and color of the English language can fail to enjoy the Bodleian Library’s new facsimile edition of Ware’s masterpiece.”—Inside Higher Education 2015 288 p. 5 x 7 1/2
