Talking Art
The Culture of Practice and the Practice of Culture in MFA Education
Gary Alan Fine
“Fine, a seasoned veteran of ethnography, has written a number of seminal and inspiring works over his distinguished career. Talking Art strikes me as the crown jewel of the corpus: a complex, multisited ethnography, rich with in-depth interviews and detailed field observations. Fine has produced a work of scholarly importance, which overturns romantic notions of the sui generis genius working in isolation. This book demonstrates the power of a veteran eye for interactionist approaches to everyday life, coupled with prose that is simultaneously probing and filled with a sense of curiosity.”—Black Hawk Hancock, author of American Allegory

Truth-Spots
How Places Make People Believe
Thomas F. Gieryn
“In this elegant volume, Gieryn demonstrates the wildly divergent ways by which specific places give rise to interpretive frames for making sense of experience. Along the way, Gieryn serves as a masterly tour guide—the sort of guide who offers insight rather than patter, open-endedness in place of simplistic closure, and just enough of his own personality to keep us interested but never so much that we grow weary of him. Gieryn completely convinces us not just that place matters, but that different places matter differently. This is a charming, thoughtful, and clever book by a gifted writer.”—Steven Epstein, Northwestern University

Receptive Bodies
Leo Bersani
“Receptive Bodies builds on previous books by Bersani with undiminished sophistication and cogency. Drawing on a lifetime of reading, thinking, and writing, he enriches our understanding of his earlier work. It is remarkable, though irrefutable, that Bersani still has new things to say here. His readers across many disciplinary fields will be thrilled by this book.”—Tim Dean, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign

Navigating Conflict
How Youth Handle Trouble in a High-Poverty School
Calvin Morrill and Michael Musheno
“This wonderfully accessible book is a welcome alternative to gloom-and-doom narratives of school violence. Morrill and Musheno draw upon a rich repository of detailed ethnographic stories to illustrate the potential of school environments to defuse conflict by fostering trust instead of suspicion, mobility instead of containment. It is a vital message for anyone concerned about schools and youth today.”—Torrin Monahan, co-editor of Schools under Surveillance: Cultures of Control in Public Education

Forrest Stuart
Winner of the ASA - Robert E. Park Award, and the CHOICE Outstanding Academic Title Award
“An important and disturbing book. . . . Stuart portrays interesting, thoughtful people located in a tenuous yet all-embracing life world. His skill at maintaining the trust of those he interviewed shines on virtually every page, and he captures a sense of energy in the air as the contestants encounter each other.”—American Journal of Sociology

Ghosts in the Schoolyard
Racism and School Closings on Chicago’s South Side
Eve L. Ewing
“Ewing masterfully illuminates the alternate realities, histories, calculations, and languages that were at play in closing dozens of predominately Black schools in Chicago. Those schools now reside in the ghostly world, and Ewing acts as a keen shaman, reminding us of what has been lost and instructing us on how to value Black children’s education going forward. A powerful book on so many levels.”—Mary Pattillo, author of Black on the Block

Human Targets
Schools, Police, and the Criminalization of Latino Youth
Victor M. Rios
With a Foreword by James Diego Vigil
“In this patient and insightful relational ethnography, Rios shows how gang-associated Latino youth, often written off as a ’lost generation,’ contain multitudes of identities and brim over with promise. . . . Critically urgent and rendered in clear prose, Human Targets is a must-read book that asks more of us.”—Matthew Desmond, author of Evicted

Animal Intimacies
Interspecies Relatedness in India’s Central Himalayas
Radhika Govindrajan

“Animal Intimacies is written in a beautiful style, and the scholarship is exemplary: both rigorous and creative. Govindrajan’s exceptional ethnography demonstrates the range of relationships people in the central Himalayas of India have with animals—relationships that can be described, ultimately, as ones of everyday, entangled intimacy.” —Naisargi N. Dave, University of Toronto

Stolen Time
Black Fad Performance and the Calypso Craze
Shane Vogel

“One of the boldest and most original studies of race and transnational mass culture in recent memory. Stolen Time promises to break wide open new directions in performance studies, cultural studies, black diaspora studies, and beyond.” —Daphne Brooks, author of Bodies in Dissent

2018 272 p. 6 x 9 35 halftones

Moral Entanglements
Conserving Birds in Britain and Germany
Stefan Bargheer

“Moral Entanglements is an impressive achievement—a feat of historical work, a dazzling parade of scholarly erudition, and an elegant piece of writing. Even if you know nothing about or have no interest in birds you will find this original and meticulous book to be strangely engrossing. Bargheer has left no stone unturned, pondered every side of every debate, and chiseled his writing to perfection. It is rare, indeed, to come across such a remarkably well-researched piece of scholarship.” —Marion Fourcade, University of California, Berkeley

Lovable Racists, Magical Negroes, and White Messiahs
David Ikard

With a Foreword by T. Denean Sharpley-Whiting

“Ikard’s book is creative and interventionist. With quite a bit of ease, he distills for the reader the ways of whiteness—to conjure tropes in the service of black inferiority and white superiority. For this journey, Ikard chooses the literary and everyday life as avenues through which we can best explore the pitfalls of the American landscape.” —Jeffrey Q. McCune, Jr., Washington University in St. Louis

“Ikard delivers a blunt account of white supremacy in American culture, and a searing indictment of those who help to prop racism up. . . . The book is both timely and necessary, serving as an essential wake-up call to all white Americans who are not actively engaged in combating racism.” —Foreword Reviews

Pathways of Desire
The Sexual Migration of Mexican Gay Men
Héctor Carrillo
Winner of the ASA - Sex and Gender Distinguished Book Award
“This magisterial work by Héctor Carrillo, the leading scholar of Mexican gay immigrant men, weaves together stories of sex, sexuality, and romance on both sides of the Mexican border. Carrillo offers us a polished theoretical interpretation of the issues, institutions, and aspirations affecting Mexican gay men and everyone in their lives. . . An extraordinary read and a major advance in our understanding.”—Matthew Gutmann, Brown University

Brokered Subjects
Sex, Trafficking, and the Politics of Freedom
Elizabeth Bernstein
“My enthusiasm for this thoughtful and masterful ethnographic analysis of trafficking discourse is unqualified. Bernstein offers a provocative challenge in tracing the work that decades of anti-trafficking interventions have been doing—from facilitating a billion-dollar industry of good intentions reinforced by a white savior industrial complex, to reinforcing sexual, cultural, and racial stereotypes. . . Brokered Subjects is a bold and timely book that is bound to compel a rethinking of contemporary understandings of gender progress and freedom.”—Ratna Kapur, Queen Mary University of London

Mobile Orientations
An Intimate Autoethnography of Migration, Sex Work, and Humanitarian Borders
Nicola Mai
“In this brilliant, compelling, and highly innovative book, Mai employs an autoethnographic lens to revisit his own two-decade-long experience of researching the relationship between migration and the sex industry. In so doing, he not only develops a powerful and cogent critique of highly coercive sexual humanitarian interventions and policies but also adds significantly to theoretical understandings of agency, mobility, and exploitation and their complex interrelations. Mobile Orientations is a truly outstanding work.”—Julia O’Connell Davidson, University of Bristol

Race, Class, and Politics in the Cappuccino City
Derek S. Hyra
“Race, Class, and Politics in the Cappuccino City is a poignant, provocative, and well-written study of the gentrification that threatens to fundamentally alter so many of the nation’s urban black ghettos, not only by displacing the poor and increasing local property values, but also by effectively changing the color of the people who reside in the inner-city. This monograph is a major contribution to our knowledge of the city.”—Elijah Anderson, author of Code of the Street and The Cosmopolitan Canopy

Cities in the Urban Age
A Dissent
Robert A. Beauregard
“Robert Beauregard has created an elegantly written, cogently framed distillation of the ‘urban problem’—persuading us to weigh the overwhelming physical presence and environmental costs of cities against their potential to pursue the common good. This is a most thoughtful guide to the moral choices that cities face.”—Sharon Zukin, author of Naked City: The Death and Life of Authentic Urban Places

The Sociology of Howard S. Becker
Theory with a Wide Horizon
Alain Pessin
Translated by Steven Rendall
“Anyone interested in society will learn a great deal from French sociologist Pessin’s lucid and compelling synthesis of how Becker studies social worlds. All sociologists owe it to their discipline to read this deft little gem of a book. Our collective enterprise will be the better for it.”—John R. Hall, University of California, Davis

Snobbery

The Practices of Distinction

David Morgan

David Morgan’s book shows that the power of the concept of snobbery is also indicative of larger societal issues, ones rooted in class divisions and wealth inequality. Snobbery traces the history of the term, drawing on a diverse set of literary and sociological sources to show how the accusation has been flung throughout the ages. Morgan explores the complex histories and different conceptions of snobbery to show us how ever-present concerns of class inequity have driven use of the term, something likely to continue as the gap between rich and poor widens.

The Endurance of Artisanal Values in North America

Kathryn Marie Dudley

“Epitomizes Becker’s insistence that the objects of art are a key factor in explaining how art works and Braverman’s focus on the labor process by examining the social relations around the production of fine acoustic guitars. This outstanding ethnography demonstrates how elite luthiers (guitar makers) have succeeded in sustaining meaningful work under their own control in the postindustrial economy.”—Work and Occupations

The Lost Black Scholar

Resurrecting Allison Davis in American Social Thought

David A. Varel

“Varel has sought to bring Allison Davis out of the shadows and he succeeds quite convincingly. This book is an important contribution to African American history, education history, and social science history. There are numerous books on African American scholars in the twentieth century, but this is the first on Davis—he is well worth the attention.”—Wayne J. Urban, University of Alabama

Making Trouble

Surrealism and the Human Sciences

Derek Sayer

With Making Trouble, sociologist and cultural historian Derek Sayer explores what it might mean to take surrealism’s critique of civilization seriously. Drawing on a remarkable range of sources, Sayer first establishes surrealism as an important intellectual antecedent to the study of the human sciences today. He then makes a compelling and well-written argument for rethinking surrealism as a contemporary methodological resource for all those who still look to the human sciences not only as a way to interpret the world, but also to change it.

The Death Gap
How Inequality Kills
David A. Ansell, MD

“The Death Gap describes critical health inequalities in the United States, which are drawn from Ansell’s gripping first-person experiences as a leading practitioner operating in Chicago’s medical safety net. He reveals the profound inequalities, particularly racial inequalities, that generate tremendous differences in lifespan and well-being across neighborhoods, and he provides powerful patient anecdotes that provide a human face to otherwise abstract challenges.”—Harold Pollack, University of Chicago

Back to Black
Retelling Black Radicalism for the 21st Century
Kehinde Andrews

“Andrews takes the concepts that underpin so much of our woolly, contemporary talk about blackness, structural racism, pan-Africanism and—most of all—radicalism, and does the hard, essential work of re-inserting meaning and critique into the debate. An unflinching and authentic contribution.”—Afua Hirsch, author of Brit(ish): On Race, Identity and Belonging

Building the Prison State

Race and the Politics of Mass Incarceration

Heather Schoenfeld

“Schoenfeld’s meticulously researched Building the Prison State is a major contribution to our understanding of mass incarceration. Schoenfeld conveys the horrors of the US punishment system, while at the same time capturing the most basic fact that this horror—and the racism at its core—is routine. Rather than focus on the agendas of conservatives, or liberals, she rightly focuses on the massive increase in carceral capacity that both have developed through new reforms that expand our ever-growing system of policing, parole, probation, and prisons. This is an indispensable book.”—Naomi Murakawa, author of The First Civil Right: How Liberals Built Prison America

Neoliberal Apartheid
Palestine/Israel and South Africa after 1994
Andy Clarno

Winner of the ASA-Paul Sweezy Book Award and the ASA—Political Economy of the World-System Distinguished Book Award

“It is against that rich trove of reflection, penned by revolutionaries fighting for their lives, that Andy Clarno deliberately situates his important study of the post-Oslo/post-Apartheid systems in Palestine and South Africa, Neoliberal Apartheid. Clarno wishes to bridge political economy and modern settler-colonial studies. . . . What Is an Event?
Robin Wagner-Pacifici

“What Is an Event? is an attempt by one of contemporary sociology’s most brilliant practitioners to theorize the process by which we come to perceive and narrate particular stretches of history as ‘events.’ . . . a remarkably ambitious sociological theory of the ‘shape’ of the past.”—Eviatar Zerubavel, Rutgers University

The Postgenomic Condition
Ethics, Justice, and Knowledge after the Genome
Jenny Reardon

“Reardon is especially interested in genomics’ role in augmenting or undermining conditions for justice and democracy. The book reads like an unfolding story with a clear narrative and argumentative agenda. She cogently argues that much of genomics research, while masquerading as a vehicle for liberal democracy and justice by revealing our common humanity, fails to create the conditions needed for a more democratic and just society.”—The Hastings Report

White Privilege
The Myth of a Post-Racial Society
Kalwant Bhopal
In White Privilege, Kalwant Bhopal draws on social science research and political and economic analysis to show how people from black and minority backgrounds are continually positioned as outsiders in public discourse and interpersonal interaction. Neoliberal policies only increase that tendency, as their effects exacerbate long-standing patterns of minority disadvantage.

The Class Ceiling
Why it Pays to be Privileged
Sam Friedman and Daniel Laurison
In The Class Ceiling, Sam Friedman and Daniel Laurison reveal the pervasiveness of that barrier in elite occupations. Drawing on analysis of jobs and workers in the UK, United States, France, Australia and Norway, they show that the higher ranks of prestigious occupations are drawn almost wholly from the upper classes—and that even when people from working-class backgrounds manage to break through into those jobs, they earn ten to fifteen percent less than their peers. A damning indictment of corporate culture, The Class Ceiling shows starkly the limits of social mobility in contemporary capitalism.

Economics for Humans, Second Edition
Julie A. Nelson
Praise for the first edition:
“A stunning rebuke of conventional assumptions that describe our economic system as a robot-like machine. In this deeply intelligent and personally engaging book, Julie Nelson emphasizes the tremendous influence of ethics and emotions on economic outcomes. . . . Everyone who studies care—or cares about social science—should read this book.”—Nancy Folbre, author of The Invisible Heart: Economics and Family Values

Why We Can’t Afford the Rich
Andrew Sayer
With a Foreword by Richard Wilkinson and an Updated Afterword by the Author
“Thought-provoking . . . a persuasive examination of the rich, the sources of their wealth, and their impact on the planet and its less fortunate inhabitants.”—Publishers Weekly

“Substantial. . . . Sayer proceeds very systematically with arguments that may be disliked but which are internally coherent, and with facts that are excessively selective at times but not dubious in themselves. Most important, Sayer does not invent economic mechanisms in the way that populists often do, never forgetting that cake-making must come before cake-distribution, even while rejecting each version of the argument that redistribution inhibits growth.”—Times Literary Supplement

Filled with the Spirit
Sexuality, Gender, and Radical Inclusivity in a Black Pentecostal Church Coalition
Ellen Lewin
“Filled with the Spirit opens up a space to rethink how we theorize black homosexuality in the context of religion. Lewin complicates traditional views of black sexuality and spirituality by focusing on an institution that is steeped in the worship rituals of the traditional black church but whose “radical inclusivity” promotes an affirmation of homosexual identity (as well as other stigmatized identities) rather than a disavowal of it. This volume makes an enormous contribution to a number of different fields, including, but not limited to, anthropology, religious studies, queer studies, and black studies.”—E. Redefining Success in America
A New Theory of Happiness and Human Development
Michael Kaufman
“A superb book, very unique for its use of grounded theory in the study of life-span patterns and in its formulation of a new life-span theory of happiness. . . . The equal emphasis on stability and change is very rare and admirable in developmental science, and the quantitative findings fit with the qualitative results uncannily well.”—Michael Shanahan, director of the Jacobs Center for Productive Youth Development, University of Zurich
2018 304 p. 6 x 9 1/8 line drawings, 32 tables

Paying the Price
College Costs, Financial Aid, and the Betrayal of the American Dream
Sara Goldrick-Rab
2016 368 p. 6 x 9 1/7 figures, 21 tables
Evidence
Howard S. Becker

“Evidence is a deeply thoughtful, original take on the relationship between our ideas, the observations we make, and our ways of figuring out how we know what we are talking about. Becker breathes new life into an important tradition that has been overshadowed—thinking about methodology in terms of the practical organization of data gathering, alongside the practical ends we may not suspect, but that end up black-boxed as ‘objective’ data.”—Iddo Tavory, author of Summoned

“With Evidence, Becker has written another must-read book for students and experienced sociologists, as well as also for all of those who do not yet understand how and why sociology is a real science.”—Liens Socio

Going Public
A Guide for Social Scientists
Arlene Stein and Jessie Daniels
Illustrations by Corey Fields

“Going Public is a lucid, stepwise breakdown of what you need to do to get your work out there. Stein and Daniels target social scientists, but their advice applies to any academic who wants to approach a general audience. They show how to devise a pitch (your spiel for editors and other gatekeepers), a peg (something that connects your pitch to current events), and a hook (the bit that will really catch an editor’s attention). They explain how to identify opportunities in the public sphere—to recognize when you can leap into the news cycle.”—Chronicle of Higher Education

Thinking Through Statistics
John Levi Martin

Thinking Through Statistics is a primer on how to maintain rigorous data standards in social science work, and one that makes a strong case for revising the way that we try to use statistics to support our theories. Martin illustrates common pitfalls that can keep researchers from rejecting false theory using a combination of visualizations, re-analyses, and simulations.

Thinking Through Methods
A Social Science Primer
John Levi Martin

“Thinking Through Methods combines a hard-nosed commitment to scholarly ideals with an endless array of provocative and clever things to say. This is a very creative work on sociological methods and there is enormous wisdom to be found in it.”—Jeremy Freese, Stanford University

Implementing Evidence-based Practice
A Model for Integrating Research and Practice
Lawrence Palinkas

Drawing on the principles and practice of implementation science, Palinkas introduces a framework for reducing the gap between research and practice that is grounded in the fundamental importance of social relationships to effective implementation.

American Journal of Sociology

A leading voice for analysis and research in the social sciences
Editor: Elisabeth S. Clemens

Established in 1895 as the first US scholarly journal in its field, American Journal of Sociology presents pathbreaking work from all areas of sociology, with an emphasis on theory building and innovative methods. AJS strives to speak to the general sociology reader and is open to contributions from across the social sciences—political science, economics, history, anthropology, and statistics in addition to sociology—that seriously engage the sociological literature to forge new ways of understanding the social.
